PREFACE.

A glance at the table of "Contents" which accompanies this Volume will show, I venture to think, that there has been no falling off in the quality of the work which has been accomplished by THE GENEALOGIST. That this is the case is a matter of much gratification to me, but is, I am aware, entirely due to the kindness and ability of those who have given me assistance, to each and all of whom I am sincerely grateful.

THE GENEALOGIST still aims, as it has always done, at being both constructive and destructive, constructive in providing material from which true pedigrees can be compiled, and destructive in exposing the fallacies and manifold inaccuracies of those false genealogies which have been left to us as a damnosa hereditas from a bye-gone and pre-scientific period. The Magazine should have the sympathy and support of all who prefer the plain and simple truth to spurious concoctions however grandiloquent.

The interesting papers contributed by Mr. J. H. Round, Sir George Sitwell, Mr. W. A. Lindsay, Mr. John A. C. Vincent,

Mr. Keith W. Murray, Mr. J. Henry Lea, and others; General Wrottesley's invaluable Pedigrees from the Plea Rolls; Mr. Walter C. Metcalfe's transcript of the Visitation of Wiltshire; and Mr. J. W. Clay's edition of Dugdale's Visitation of Yorkshire have, I am sure, been greatly appreciated by all our readers. The Seize Quartiers of the Kings and Queens of England, by G. E. C. and Mr. G. W. Watson, a monument of patient and learned genealogical research, Mr. Oswald Barron's careful and much needed edition of the Parliamentary Roll of Arms, and the list of Wills in the Court of Delegates have been concluded in the present Volume.

Before closing this short preface, I must appeal as earnestly as I can to those interested in the success of the Magazine to do all in their power to increase the list of subscribers, for though THE GENEALOGIST has long been regarded as a standard work, not only in Great Britain, but in Greater Britain and the United States also, the list of those who give it financial aid is by no means co-extensive with the large number of persons who constantly consult its pages. It would, I am sure, be regarded as a real loss by all those interested in genealogy and kindred subjects should the Magazine cease to exist, but it is obvious that it is impossible to carry on an enterprise of this character without adequate pecuniary support.

The Genealogist.

THE ORIGIN OF THE LINDSAYS.

BY SIR GEORGE SITWELL, BART., M.P.

Two generations of genealogists have lavished time and labour in the attempt to discover the origin of the house of Lindsay. Their struggles have been in vain. Lord Crawford's descent from the De Limesays, which Burke tells us has been "surmised, after long and patient investigation," remains to-day unproved and improbable, and the investigators would have done better to have told us simply in the words of the old Scotch poet,

"Of England come the Lyndysay, Mair of them I can nocht say."

I propose, however, in this article to say a good deal more of them, and to trace the family to its Domesday settlement in England, from England into Normandy, and from Normandy in the tenth century into Germany. I do not claim that I can produce, at a few days notice, such proof as would be accepted by the Heralds College, but I do say, with the greatest confidence, that the descent I am indicating is so clear that it will eventually be accepted by all genealogists.

In Domesday we find a certain "Baldricus" holding of the Earl of Chester in Hamingebi, Farforde, to which Oxecumbe was attached, and Fulnotebi, all in the province of Lindsey. This Baldricus, as appears by King William's charter of confirmation to the monks of St. Evroul in 1081, gave to that Abbey the tithe of his lands at Farefort; and his donation was confirmed by the first Earl Ranulf of Chester in the following terms:—

"decimam quoque de farefort et oxcumbe quam dedit Baldricus de Lindissi."¹

To this charter of confirmation Ricardus filius Baldrici de Lindissi is a witness.

Hamingebi in the North Riding was the caput of Baldric's Lincolnshire property in 1086, and in the Lindsey survey of 1114-16 we find Richard de Heningeabi holding two carucates of Earl Richard.² This is evidently the same person as Ricardus filius Baldrici de Lindissi. There are many evidences of the presence of various members of this family in Lincolnshire throughout the twelfth century; and Hamingebi seems to have remained in their possession, for a Richard de Lindesi was one of the knights whose services were granted by Ranulph, Earl of Chester, to Earl David, brother of the Scotch King, in 1189, and "Emmungeby" (undoubtedly Hamingebi) one of the properties mentioned in the charter for which the services were to be rendered.¹ A charter of this Richard de Lindesi, made in c. 1181-5, is preserved in the Harleian collection.² He was evidently the head of his family, and the representative of Baldric, and held his lands by service for one knight's fee.

¹ Cartulary of St. Evroul at Paris, fo. 16, number 31. Windsor Herald has kindly lent me a copy of the charter.

² Greenstreet's edition, 18, and Chester Waters, 32.

Having thus pointed out the original settlement of the Lindsays in England, and the manor in Lindsey at which they resided, at least occasionally, for a hundred and thirty years after the Conquest, I propose to follow their ancestor Baldric back to his Norman home. The Lincolnshire tenants of Hugo Lupus did not hold of the Earl in that county alone. Robert de Rodelent and Osbern Fitz Tezson, whose gifts to St. Evroul are mentioned in the same sentence with that of Baldric, were barons in Cheshire; as were also William Fitz Nigel and Hugh (Fitz Osbern) who appear side by side with Baldric in the great survey. Some of the lesser landowners may also be traced in both counties. It is, therefore, something more than an assumption when I assert that the Lincolnshire Baldricus is the same person as the Baldricus who held of the Earl in Cogle (either Kelsall or Coghall) in Cheshire.

Now this Baldricus, the Earl's tenant in Cheshire, had a wife named "Billeheldis," as appears by Earl Hugh's charter of 1093 to the Abbey of St. Werburgh:—

"Item Billeheld uxor Baldrici dedit Pecfortunam. Teste Normanno de Arrecio, multisque aliis."³

It is very noticeable as regards the companions of Baldricus, both in Lincolnshire and Cheshire, that many of them appear as principals or witnesses in charters to the Abbey of St. Evroul. Cannot we identify Baldricus of Lincolnshire and Cheshire, who gave the tithes of his Lincolnshire lands to St. Evroul, with some other Baldricus of the same date who was also a benefactor to that Abbey. I think we can, in the person of Baldric, lord of the Honour of Bocquencé, and conjecture ripens into conviction when we find that the latter had also a wife of the name of Billeheld:—

"Tempore Rogerii abbatis, qui abbati Serloni successit, venit Billeheldis uxor Baldrici de Balhenceio in capitulum Sancti Ebrulfi, et accepit orationes et beneficium loci, et dedit decimam de suo dominio, id est de sua carruca, et hoc libenter concesserunt filii sui, Rodbertus videlicet dominus de honore et Baldricus. Eodem die, hoc est in die inventionis sancte crucis, Rodbertus et Baldricus, filii ejus, qui cum ipsa venerant in capitulum, concesserunt sua spontanea voluntate quicquid pater et antecessores eorum loco dederant et concesserant, et cum matre sua fraternitatem loci cum magna devotione susceperunt, et ecclesiam sancti Martini nominatim concesserunt, et de his omnibus cum sua matre super altare donationem et concessionem posuerunt. Quapropter abbas dedit eis unum caballum, licet ipsi minime requisissent. Quod cum gratiarum actione susceperunt, eo quod major frater, videlicet Rodbertus, Baldricum fratrem juniorem instruere tunc cupiebat ad militem. Testes Wigerius patruus eorumdem fratrum et filius ejus Fulco, Fulbertus forestarius, eorum, Hugo filius Fulcaldi, Marseius, Odo cocus, Natalis nutricius infantis Willelmi videlicet de Roelent et Goderfridus sanguinator.”¹

The descent of this Baldric de Bocquencé from a certain Baldricus the German, who entered the service of Richard, Duke of Normandy, at the end of the tenth or beginning of the eleventh century is fully recorded by Orderic.² I give a translation, which owing to exigencies of time, is not my own:—

“The monks of St. Evroult were well pleased that Arnold was restored to his lawful jurisdiction, and with his support resisted the oppressions of some troublesome persons who had taken advantage of their defenceless state. In the time of the Abbot Theodoric and Robert, his successor, Baldric and Viger de Bauquency and their people, had not only carried themselves insolently towards the monks, and were insubordinate to them as their lords, but often harassed them and their servants. Robert, on his becoming abbot, thought it disgraceful to submit any longer to such conduct. He, therefore, having consulted the brethren, gave up the rebels to his cousin, that he might chastise with a soldier’s strong hand the stubbornness of men who were too proud to submit to the gentle rule of the monks. Arnold laid upon them the burden of many hard services, compelling them and their people to guard his fortified castles of Echaufour and St. Ceneri. Upon this they earnestly entreated Abbot Robert and the monks that they would be pleased to take them again under their own rule, promising in future entire submission and better conduct. The abbot and monks, listening to their prayers, besought Arnold to restore them to their service under the church, which to those who are humble and well disposed is truly liberal.”

“At this time Roger, the eldest son of Engenulf de Aquila was slain. Engenulf and his wife Richveride came to St. Evroult in deep grief, entreating the prayers and good offices of the monks for the good of the souls of themselves and their son Roger, which were granted; and they thereupon offered his best horse to God and the monks. The horse being very valuable, Arnold begged to have it, yielding up Baldric and his people with the fief of Bauquency to be subject to the monks as before. This was done: Arnold receiving the horse from his cousin Robert, and restoring Baldric with the land of Bauquency to his former tenure under the abbey. Baldric, overjoyed at having thus escaped from the burdensome service of Arnold, granted to the monks a domain which he possessed in the vill of St. Evroult, as also his land upon the rivulet of Douet Villars, and that of the Norman Mica and Benignus. Then Baldric swore fealty to Abbot Robert with joined hands, promising suit and service, and demanding that his fief should not again be severed from the estates of the monks. They granted and ratified this, and both Baldric and Robert, his son, from that time to the present day, have done service to none but the monks for the lands of Bauquency."

"The abbey of St. Evroult stands in the fief of Bauquency, and this Baldric was a man of high birth. For Gislebert, Count de Brionne, nephew of Richard, Duke of Normandy, gave his niece in marriage to Baldric the German, who came into Normandy, with Viger, his brother, to take service under the Duke. From this marriage sprang six sons, besides several daughters, viz., Nicholas de Basqueville, Fulk d'Aunoun, Robert de Courcy, Richard de Neuville, Baldric de Bauquency, and Viger of Apulia. They all distinguished themselves by great valour under Duke William, from whom they received great riches and honours, and left to their heirs vast possessions in Normandy."

"Baldric who, with his brother Viger, held the fief of Bauquency, gave his sister Elizabeth in marriage to Fulk de Bonneval, a brave knight, and for her dowry the church of St. Nicholas, built by his father, with the lands adjoining. Fulk, not forgetful of the life to come, presented to God, for the good of his soul and those of his kindred, his son Theodoric, to whom Abbot Theodoric was baptismal sponsor, offering to St. Evroult the youth and the abbey of St. Nicholas, of which we have just spoken. Baldric, Viger, and William de Bonneval, readily confirmed these offerings."

Though it would appear from the pages of Orderic that there was only one Baldric de Bocquencé in possession of that fief from c. 1045-93, I have strong suspicions that the period may really have been covered by a father and son bearing the same names. Baldric is recorded to have given certain property in free marriage with his sister Elizabeth to Fulco de Bonavilla. But surely if this Baldric is the same person as Baldric, the fifth son of Baldric the German, the portion would have been given not by him but by his eldest brother. Again I notice that in Duke William's charter of c. 1050 Baldricus de Balchencei is referred to in the past tense:—

"Theodericus Abbas emit ipse ab Eraldo prefati Willelmi filio, consenciente Roberto avunculo et jubente comite Willelmo, terram de Balchencei, sicut tenuerat Baldricus ejus comitis arcearius."¹

This conjecture seems to be supported also by Rodbert de Bocquencé's confirmation to St. Evroul of all that his father and ancestors had given, and by a study of the descendants of Baldric the German's four elder sons.²

I have made no attempt to connect Walter de Lindesi of 1116-20, who was apparently the first to settle in Scotland, with this family, though I think it very probable that he may have been brother to Richard, son of Baldric. It was probably this Walter who at some date earlier than 1185 gave land in Fordington, co. Lincoln, to the Templars. Fordington was held by the Earl of Chester in 1086. The collateral descendants of Walter held a knight's fee in Suffolk of the honour of St. Edmund de veteri feofamento, and I agree with the late Lord Crawford in conjecturing that Walter had been enfeoffed in c. 1102 by Robert the Abbot, who was son to Hugo Lupus, and had formerly been a monk of St. Evroul. Here also the indications leads us back to our starting point, to the Earldom of Chester and to the Abbey of St. Evroul.

This new derivation of the house of Lindsay must appeal, I think, to our sense of historic fitness. It takes us back more than a thousand years, and finds Lord Crawford's ancestors then, as ever afterwards, belonging to the old nobility and to the "pares," of whom the sovereign is "primus." It commences with a soldier of fortune, himself a man of high birth, who left the home of his ancestors in Germany to serve Duke Richard of Normandy, and was given in marriage the niece of Gislebert, Count of Brionne. The five sons who sprang from this union gained, we are told, great riches and honour, and vast possessions by their valour in the wars of Duke William, and their descendants were distinguished by the same adventurous spirit. One followed the De Hautevilles into Apulia; seven at least¹ took part in the conquest of England, founding there the great houses of Neville, De Courci, Dawney, St. Martin and Fitz Erneis; one fought under Earl Hugh in Cheshire; two accompanied David Earl of Huntingdon into the Lowlands, and one, if not more than one, played his part in the reduction of Ireland. Though the race from which they sprang was not originally Norman, I know of none which has exhibited in such a high degree the Norman genius for adventure, for conquest, and for administration.

BALDRICUS TEUTONICUS, a German magnae nobilitatis, who came into Normandy Ricardo Duci servire (Richard II, 996-1026). Lord of Baqueville-en-Caux, and of the Honour of Bocquencé, which he held of Geroie, by the service of castle-guard at Echauffour and St. Ceneri, and builder of the church of St. Nicholas (des Lettiers). Identical with the Baldric de Bauquencel who, by the advice of Geroie, placed his fief under the jurisdiction of Roger, Bishop of Lisieux (before 1022), and probably with the Baldric who witnesses several of Duke Richard II.'s charters.

ELIZABETH, wife of Fulco de Bonavilla (St. Aubin de Bonneval). He gave the church of St. Nicholas, part of her portion, to St. Evroul, on their son Theodoric (born c. 1050-8) being received as a monk.

HAWISE, wife of Erneis, the brother of Raoul Tesson and cofounder of Fontenay. Their son Robert Fitz Erneis fell at the foot of the standard at Hastings.

1 NICHOLAUS DE BASCHEVILLE (Baqueville-en-Caux, eldest son of Baldric the German). He married a niece of the Duchess Gunnora (da. of Herfastus), and was ancestor of William Martell and Walter de St. Martin. In 1047 he witnessed Duke William's charter as Nicholas filius Baldrici. He was probably father of Martel de Baqueville, who fought at Hastings, 1066.¹

2 FULCO DE ALNOU (Aunou-le-Faucon), second son of Baldric and ancestor of the Dawneys.

3 RODBERTUS DE CURCEIO (near Croisanville), third son of Baldric, ancestor of the de Courcis, and father of Richard, who was present at Hastings, 1066.

4 RICHARD DE NOVAVILLA (perhaps Neuville-sur-Tonque), fourth son of Baldric and ancestor of the de Nevilles.

6 WIGER APULIENSIS, sixth son of Baldric, had a share in the Honour of Bocquencé, and rebelled against Theodoric (1050-8). Witnessed Billeheld's grant, after 1091, and confirmed that of Fulco de Bonavilla.

5 BALDRICUS DE BALGENZAIO, 5th son of Baldric, lord of the Honour of Bocquencé and bow-bearer (arcearius, archearius, or farchocarius) to William, Duke of Normandy. In c. 1050-8 gave the church of St. Nicholas to his sister Elizabeth in free marriage with Fulco de Bonavilla. The overlordship of Bocquencé, in which the Abbey of St. Evroul stands, having been sold by Ernald, son of William Geroie, to Theodoric the Abbot, Baldric rebelled against the latter (1050-1058), but eventually submitted and did homage to the Abbot Robert, c. 1060. Having accompanied Richard, Vicomte D'Avranches, or his son, Hugo Lupus, to England, Baldricus held under the latter in Hamingebi, Farforde, and Fulnotebi in Lindsey, and Coele in Cheshire. Before 1081 he gave the tithes of Farefort and Oxecumbe to St. Evroul, and Earl Ranulf's charter of confirmation describes him as Baldric de Lindissi. He probably died before 1093.

BILLEHELDIS.

After the death of her husband gave the tithes of her demesne to St. Evroul. (Between 1091 and 1126) Before 1093 gave the manor of Peckforton, co. Chester, to St. Werburgh.

RODBERTUS, LORD OF BOCCUENCE at the time of his mother's grant to St. Evroul. He confirmed her gift, and gave the church of St. Martin to the Abbey. A witness to Roger Tirell's charter. Living when Orderic wrote the first book of his History.

RICARDUS FILIUS BALDRICI de Lindissi, a witness to Earl Ranulf's confirmation of Baldric's gift of the tithes of Farefort and Oxecumbe. As Richard de Heningebi holds that manor (Baldric's in 1086) under Richard, Earl of Chester.

BALDRICUS, a youth at the time of his mother's grant (1091-1126), and by Rodbert's desire instructus ad militem.

RICHARD DE LINDESI, 1189, holds a knight's fee of Ranulf, Earl of Chester, and his service (apparently for Heningebi, which is mentioned in the charter) is transferred by the Earl to David, brother of the Scotch King.

ANNO 1513. ISABELLE DE SARRENSV

MONUMENTAL INSCRIPTIONS AT SARNESFIELD, CO. HEREFORD.

Sarnesfield at the time of the Domesday Survey formed part of the vast possessions of Roger de Laci, and then gave name to a family who held it for at least three hundred years, when it passed by the coheirress of Sir Nicholas de Sarnesfield, K.G., to the Moningtons, in whose family it remained till their extinction in male line in 1741, and in female line at the end of the last century. Philip de Sarnesfield held one and a half hides of Hugh de Lacy in 1109. A Philip de Sarnesfield appears as witness to a charter, undated, of Henry de Penebrugge. Roger de Sarnesfield, Philip de Sarnesfield, and Robert de Sarnesfield occur in the Testa de Nevil. William de Sarnesfield appears as party to a deed, undated, between 1285 and 1298. Walter de Sarnesfield occurs in a Roll of Arms (Archæologia, vol. xxxvi, 427), circa 1295. A Geoffrey de Sarnesfield was living in 1314. John de Sarnesfield was Lord of the Manor of Sarnesfield in 1316. In 1347 Margaret de Sarnesfield presented to the living of Sarnesfield, and Robert de Sarnesfield in 1348, and Thomas de Sarnesfield in 1349. In 1359 Letters of Protection to pass with Edward, Prince of Wales, beyond sea, were granted to Nicholas and John de Sarnesfield. Nicholas was after a Knight of the Garter, and it is possible that John may have been his brother. Thomas de Sarnesfield presented to the living of Sarnesfield in 1388, and Thomas, I presume the same person, died seized of the Manor of Sarnesfield in 1390. Probably he was the father of Sir Nicholas. Sir Nicholas died about the end of the year 1394, leaving a widow, Margaret, who was living in 1431. He left two daughters, his coheirs, one married to Hugh Monington, who died in 1424-5, the other to Walter Bromwich of Little Sarnesfield in the parish of Weobley, whose descendant was residing there temp. Henry VIII.¹ Great Sarnesfield became the inheritance of the Moningtons, it is therefore probable that Hugh Monington's wife was the elder coheir. A full memoir of Sir Nicholas de Sarnesfield will be found in Beltz's "Memorials of the Order of the Garter," p. 308.

Several fragments of thirteenth or fourteenth century floriated crosses, which have served as memorials to the early inhabitants of Sarnesfield, still remain in the church, but one only bears any inscription. This commemorates an Isabel de Sarnesfield, and appears to be of fourteenth century workmanship. The accompanying engraving, from a sketch made by J. Paul Rylands, Esq., F.S.A., gives an accurate representation of it, and renders further comment unnecessary.

The church consists of nave, with south aisle, chancel, and chapel on south side belonging to the manor, south porch, and square tower in which are two bells with these inscriptions:—

1. Iesv salva me.
2. Peace and good neighbourhood. 1726.

There are no monuments in the chancel.

On the wall of the said Chapel.

Sacred to the Memory of Ann Teresa Monington. She was born the 21st Nov^r 1735, at Sarnesfield Court the Seat of her Ancestors where She resided many years in the exercise of every social virtue, and in hospitality to her neighbours and benevolence to the Poor, surpassed by none. On the 2nd Feb^y 1780 She took the Veil in the Franciscan Convent of English Ladies at Bruges in Flanders, driven from thence by the French Revolution in 1794, with them retired to the Abbey House in Winchester where she died on the 24th Nov. following and her Remains are deposited. Through Life Revered in Death regretted. On her embracing a Religious State She renounced all her Worldly possessions and generously gave up her Estates in this County to her Kinsman John Webb Weston, Esq. who in grateful remembrance has caused this tablet to be erected. R.I.P.

Here lies the Body of Bridget Monnington youngest Daughter and Coheiress of Edward Monnington, Esq^r, of Sarnesfield Court, who died in the 34th year of her age, A.D. 1775. Every pleasing endowment of Humanity And every Virtue that Christianity inspires were the ornaments as well as the happiness of her life. Snatched away in the prime of Youth Her loss was much lamented by all who knew her, But by no one so Severely felt As by her only Surviving Sister Anne Monnington who erected this Monument As a Memorial of her own love And of Her Virtues. R.I.P.

The following pedigree, though by no means complete, is sufficient to show the descent of the Sarnesfield estate in the Monnington family till that family became extinct in male line on the death of Edward Monnington in 1741, and so far as I have been able to ascertain in female line also, on that of his daughter Anne, the Franciscan nun,

1794, whose monumental inscription is given above. It will be noticed that she is then called Ann Teresa, and Ann only on the monument of her sister Bridget. I infer that "Teresa" was her name in Religion.

It is probable that the Moningtons took their name from the parish of Monnington on Wye. John de Monington was M.P. for co. Hereford in 1340. Another John de Monington was Mayor of Hereford in 1425. Sir Richard Monington¹ married for his second wife, Janet, widow of Sir John Croft, and daughter of the famous Owen Glendour. She married for her third husband Sir John Upton. Johanna, daughter of Sir Thomas Blount of Kinlet, Sheriff of Salop 1480, was wife of John Monington.²

Hugh de Monington, member of Parliament for co. Hereford 1364-9, and probably also in 1344, 1346, and 1352, married Ellenor, daughter and heir of Sir John Lawton, of Lawtonshope, in the parish of Canon Pyon. He was living in 10 Ed. III, 1336, and bore for Arms, Argent, on a bend Sable three mullets Or.³ Robinson calls Hugh de Monington "Sir," and states that he resided at Canon Pyon.⁴ He had issue, Hugh Monington, probably High Sheriff in 1390. Inq. p.m. 3 Hen. VI, 1424-5. Married (Isabell?) daughter and coheir of Sir Nicholas Sarnesfield, K.G.⁵ Arms, Azure, an eagle displayed Or, crowned Argent. Their son Richard⁶ Monington of Sarnesfield, married Ellen, daughter and coheir of John Walweyn⁷ of Wellington, co. Hereford, and had issue,—

Sir Thomas Monington of Sarnesfield, M.P. for the County of Hereford 1467 and 1472. He is probably the Thomas Monington who was High Sheriff of Herefordshire in 1462, 1474, and 1490. He was a zealot Yorkist, and was knighted at the battle of Stoke-by-Newark, 1487. The manor of Brugge (Bridge Solers) was granted to him on its escheating to the Crown on the attainder of Thomas, eighth Lord Clifford, who was killed at Towton in 1461, and continued with his descendants till 1622, when Richard Monington sold it to Thomas Geers.⁸ He married Elizabeth, eldest daughter, and one of the twelve coheirs of Sir Simon Milborne⁹ of Icombe, co. Gloucester, and Tillington, co. Hereford. She brought Almeley Castle in dower to her husband. She married secondly John Whittington of Pauntley, co. Gloucester, and had issue by him.

Sir Thomas Monington had issue by his wife Elizabeth Milborne, besides a daughter Sybell, who married first . . . Hame, and secondly John (?Edward) Try of Hardwick :—

- III. John Monington of Buttas and Lawtonshope in the parish of Canon Pyon, co. Hereford. Lessee of Lawtonshope, jure uxoris, temp. Henry VI. Robinson calls him of Marston. Living 1551. Married Elizabeth, daughter of . . . Lawton of Lawtonshope¹ They had issue:—
- i. Henry Monington, on whose death the manor of Lawtonshope passed to his brother George.
 - ii. Alexander Monington. See MS. A 20, fo. 230, in Coll. Arms.
 - iii. George Monington of Lawtonshope. Living 1514. Married a daughter of . . . Bevill of Ripley Court, co. Kent. They had a son, John Monington, who married Mary, daughter of Richard Welford of Wistaston, co. Hereford, by whom he had—
 1. William Monington of Buttas and Lawtonshope, who by Joyce, daughter of Simon Hiatt, of co. Gloucester, had George Monington, aged eight at the Visitation of Herefordshire, 1569, and he died without issue, having married Margaret, daughter of Ralph Clive of Walford, co. Salop.²
 2. Richard Monington of . . . co. Hereford, who had an only daughter and heir Sibill, who became the second wife of Sir Rowland Morton of Twining, co. Gloucester,³ by whom she left issue.
 3. Roger Monington,⁴ married Anne, daughter of John Rompney of Lullesley, co. Worcester, and a daughter Susanna.
 4. George Monington, mentioned in the will of his son, William Monington, 1629. Married Elizabeth, daughter of James Tompkins, and had besides the said William, Thomas Monington, Baskerville Monington, John Monington, and a daughter Ellinor.
 5. Hugh Monington.
 6. Henry Monington.
 7. Edward Monington of Bodenham. Married Frances Unett, and had a daughter Eleanor, wife of William Parrott of Morton-on-Lugg, co. Hereford.

I. Thomas Monington¹ of Sarnesfield, High Sheriff of Herefordshire in 1511, 1532, and 1540. Died 17 Jan. 1551. Inq. p.m. Married Anne, daughter of Henry Tracy of Toddington, co. Gloucester. She remarried William Wye of Tewkesbury. They had issue one son Richard, and two daughters, i. Elizabeth, who married first James Baskerville² of Wotton in Wellington, co. Hereford, son and heir of William Baskerville, Inq. post mortem 8 Feb. 32 Henry VIII, by whom she had 1. Ellianor, wife of . . . Roger; 2. Anna, wife of Richard Monington, who had issue Johanna, daughter and heir, married Walter Baskerville of Pontrilas, bastard son of Thomas Baskerville, and left issue; 3. Johanna, wife of Thomas Pembridge; and ii. Margaret, wife of Thomas Hayward of Hereford.

II. Richard Monington³ of Sarnesfield, aged forty at the date of his father's Inquisition, 1551, High Sheriff of Herefordshire in 1557, Lord of the manor of Brugge 1552. Married Katherine, daughter of John Scudamore of Holm Lacy, and had issue:—

i. Thomas Monington of Sarnesfield, of whom presently.

 - iii. Sybell, married John Seaborn of Sutton, co. Hereford.
 - iv. Anne, married Richard Wigmore of Lucton, co. Hereford, Bailiff of the Monastery of Leominster. Died circa 1580.

i. Thomas Monington of Sarnesfield, married Anne, daughter of Richard Seaborn of Sutton; she was living in 1602. Her husband died before 5 March, 1602-3. His will dated 23 October, 1597, proved in the Consistory Court of Hereford, 29 April, 1603, is as follows:—Thomas Monyngton of Sarnsfylde in perfect health. If my wife keep herself unmarried she shall have the use of half my household stuff during her life—then to son Richard. To my son Richard the other half of my household stuff, and if Richard shall die before he cometh to lawful age my son Thomas shall have the said household stuff. To Anne my wife

¹ It is probable that this John is identical with John Monington of the City of Hereford, gent., whose will is dated 7 and 14 Sept. 1625. He devises messuage called Shellwicke's Court and lands in Shellwicke, Houldmer, Hampton Bushopp, or the suburbs of the City of Hereford, or elsewhere in the County of Somerset (? error for Hereford) to wife Katherine for life, remainder to Richard Monington of Merston, co. Hereford and his heirs males, remainder to John Monington brother of the said Richard and his heirs males, remainder to James Monyngton another brother of the said Richard, remainder to William Monington of Webley, gent., remainder over to right heirs. To every of my sisters children except Sibbell the daughter of Thomas Oviatt £5 apiece. To repair of the church of Holdmer 10s. My sister Margaret Hunt to take no benefit by my will. To my cousin Richard Pearle 10s. My brother in law Oviatt's children. Cousins Anthony Pembridge, Esq^r, and Thomas Lotchard of Pembridge, gent., executors. Adm'on with will annexed in P.C.C. 28 July 1651 to Peter Oviat, nephew by the sister, both executors being dead. (148 Gray). He died 15 Sept. 1625, and was buried in Hereford Cathedral. all my kyne. I have made a feoffment for the levying and gathering £500 to the marriage of my daughter Catharyn, the money to be levied out of my lands in Sarnsfyld, Lyttle Sarnesfyld, excepted the Lye Coort, and also out of my land of Brydgc and Brydgmynlls. All my rents in Almely to my daughters Sybell and Anne for term of 16 years. Son Thomas shall have £10 out of my manor of Sarnsfyld for term of his life. My cosyn and servant Alles Moyngton shall have the new mylls in Sarnsfyld for term of her life. To daughter Catheryn 20 poundes of my goods. To son Thomas 20 pounds of my goods. To my brother Richard Monyngton four poundes of annuity for term of his life out of my manor of Sarnsfyld if he shall not make claim to the lands in Weobley w^{ch} I sold to John Smyth. To Thomas Poytheres my servant two of my best oxen, and he to have a lease, the lease granted to Richard Hopley, Anne Hopley, and Myles Hopley being determined of Allhaston [Hallaston] within my manor of Sarnsfyld, for term of his life paying the rent reserved in the said Hopleys lease. John Mune my servant and Thomas Smyth my servant shall have a lease of my demeanes of the Hurst for the term of their lives, the lease in esse granted to Roger Phellpotes and his son being determined, paying the old rent. Son Thomas and daughters Sybill and Anne to have rents of the Lye Coort, Tadington, and Marston, to help to maintain them till my son Richard shall come to his full age. Son Richard to receive the rents of my lands in Dynnington and Byerley to help to maintain him in his minority. Wife Anne residuary legatee. To my brother William Monyngton my best bay gelding. To my brother in law M^r Roger Vaughan my turkesse ryng. John Braser and Steaven Braser shall have a lease of Ticketon for term of their lives or the longest liver of them after the determination of Harrie Parterich and his wifes lease, paying the old rent. Mentions the profits of my manors of Sarnsfyld and Brydgc. Son Richard to have the lease of the Streete meadow. Anne my wife, my brother Richard Monyngton, and my brother William Monyngton executors. "Wrytten wth myne owne hand" the 23 Oct., 1597. There is a bond with the will by all three executors dated 5 March, 1602.

Thomas Monington had besides the children mentioned above, a son James. Catharine married John Harper of Chilston, co. Hereford. Sybill married Nicholas Barnesley of Bosley, co. Worcester.

Richard Monington, the son and heir, of Sarnesfield. Matriculated at Gloucester Hall, Oxford, 8 May, 1601, aged fourteen. Student of the Inner Temple 1604. Entered his pedigree in the 1634 Visitation of Herefordshire. Living 1641. Died before 1645. Married first, Elizabeth, daughter of Sir Francis Stonor of Stonor, co. Oxford, by whom he apparently had no issue. He married secondly, Elizabeth, daughter of Sir Edward Winter of Lidney, co. Gloucester, Kt.¹ Her will as "Elizabeth Monnington of Sarnesfield, widow, and relict of Richard Monnington late of Sarnesfield, Esq.," is dated 6 October 15 Charles II. (1663). Makes her daughter Anne Monnington universal legatee and sole executrix. She proved in Consistory Court of Hereford 3 Feb. 1667. Witnesses, J. Barthron, Rowland Adams, Alice Fowle.

Inventory £457 - 16 - 8. The date of probate in the Act Book is 13 Feby. Mrs. Monnington was a popish recusant, and her estate was sequestered in 1649,¹ a lease of this estate was granted to Rowland Adams for twenty five years, if her recusancy so long continue, at £135. From the fact of Rowland Adams appearing as a witness to her will it is, perhaps, not unfair to infer that there was some collusion between them.

The issue of Richard Monnington by Elizabeth Winter, was Edward Monnington, aged about twelve years at the Visitation of 1634. Died sine prole; John Monnington of Sarnesfield; and Anne, who proved her mother's will, and was alive in 1683.²

John Monnington of Sarnesfield, married Gaynor, daughter of . . . Roberts of Llanarmon in Yale, co. Flint. She died 24 March, 1688-9, and was buried in the church at Sarnesfield as appears by a monumental inscription given above. They had issue one son, Thomas Monnington of Sarnesfield, and two daughters, Elizabeth, buried at Sarnesfield 17..., and Mary married to Thomas Berrington³ of Cowarne, co. Hereford.

Thomas Monnington of Sarnesfield, married Mary Tylden, and dying 4 May, 1709, was buried in Sarnesfield Church as appears by monumental inscription given above. His will, undated, as Thomas Monnington of Sarnesfield, is as follows:—To be buried with as much privacy and little expence as decency will permitt. If I dye at or near Sarnesfield I desire to be enter'd near my Honour'd mothers' grave. Gives annuity of £25 to sister Mrs Elizabeth Monington and charges it upon his farm of Lower Dewall in the parish of Dilwyn in the tenure of John Herring or his under tenant, and on farm called the Birches in the parishes of Eardisland and Weobley in the tenure of James Davies at the yearly rent of £10. To said sister Elizabeth Monington for her life half of the rents accruing from the lands which were my mothers in the parish of Lanarmon in Yale in the co. of Flint, and half profits of those houses in the Burrough of Weobley purchased by my said mother, other moiety to his two daughters Mary and Elizabeth for their lives, and after the decease of their aunt the whole for their lives, and after their decease to "my heirs for ever." To my son Edward Monington £300 at my death or on his attaining the age of 21, and also the present reserved rent of the farm of Marston in the tenure of Mr Greenley for his life. To my four daughters Mary, Elizabeth, Frances, and Gaynor £2 000 equally amongst them at 21. Mentions the deed of settlement made upon my marriage with my present dear wife. To daughters Mary and Elizabeth £100 apiece being in consideration of a legacy of £50 each left in my hands for their use by their Godfather Doctor Gorden. To my other two daughters Lewesia and Catharine, both under age, £400 charged upon the lands called the Parks of Almeley. To Elizabeth Adams a yearly rent charge of 40^s being a legacy left her at the request of my aunt Ann Monington upon her death bed, for which she hath a lease from me. To my present dear wife Mary Monington all my plate. To my son Thomas Monington all those few books I have, a bed, etc., and the furniture of the middle room. To wife Mary Monington and son Thomas Monington subject to the trusts following, all my lands called the Parks of Almeley in the parish of Almeley, co. Hereford, my farm of Marston in the parish of Pembridge, my farm of Lower Dewall in the parish of Dilwyn purchased of Roger Herring and now in the tenure of John Herring, lands called the Birches purchased of one Mr Cox, lands purchased of Stephen Dewall in the parish of Sarnesfield, lands purchased of Thomas Hopley of Sutton in the parish of Sarnesfield, messuage known by the name of Witham's farm in Woodmanton in the parish of Sarnesfield in the tenure of the widow Adams, and all other my lands, in trust to pay debts and childrens portions, with remainder to said son Thomas Monington and his heirs. No executor named. Adm'on with will annexed in Consistory Court, Hereford, to Mary Monington his relict, and Thomas Monington his son 15 July, 1709. Inventory £1096 - 4 - 7.

An abstract of the above mentioned deed of settlement in the hand-writing of Thomas Monington is in my possession. It is dated 8 May 1683, between Thomas Monington and Anne Monington of the 1st part, Mary Tilden of the 2nd part, Gaynor Monington mother of Thomas Monington of the 3rd part, Edward Ange and Thomas Ange of the 4th part, John Belson and Jonathan Barthrop of the 5th part, William Whorewood and Charles Wintour of the 6th part. It does not disclose the parentage of Mary Tilden, nor the probable fact that she was a second wife.

Of the daughters mentioned in Thomas Monington's will Elizabeth married Thomas Williams of Holywell, co. Flint, and had issue. Catherine became a nun; made her religious profession 3 Feb. 1729, then aged twenty six, died 26 Dec. 1733, at Rouen. Thomas Monington, the eldest son, appears to have been of intemperate habits, and was sent abroad by his family, and his brother Edward obtained possession of the Sarnesfield estate, his unfortunate history is too long to enter into here. It is sufficient to say that he died in Flanders, unmarried, leaving a will dated 9 Dec. 1727, now in my possession, which does not appear to have been proved.

Edward Monington, the second son and last heir male of the family, was a merchant trading with Portugal, and apparently possessed of considerable property. He married first, 27 May, 1727, Anne, daughter of Humphrey Steare, of St. Andrew's, Holborn. She is mentioned, as also her husband, in her father's will, dated 20 August, 1728, proved in P.C.C. 29 July, 1729; also their son, Robert Monington, who died young. Edward Monington married secondly Bridget, daughter of John Webbe, of St. George the Martyr, Queen's Square. She died 11 Feb. 17..., aged forty-nine, and was buried at Sarnesfield. M.I. He died 14 April 1741, aged forty-nine, and was also buried at Sarnesfield. His will dated 10 Oct., 1736, was proved in P.C.C. 13 June, 1741, by Bridget, his relict. (160 Spurway.) Of his two daughters Anne Teresa and Bridget, their monumental inscriptions which precede this note give all that need be said here. There is a hatchment still remaining in the church which is no doubt that of Bridget. John Webbe above mentioned had a brother Thomas Webbe of Brook Green in Hammer-smith, who had a son John Webbe of Sutton Place, co. Surrey, and Sarnesfield Court, who took the name and arms of Weston, and is the John Webb-Weston to whom Ann Teresa Monington gave the Sarnesfield estate. He had issue, Thomas Joseph Webb-Weston¹ who assumed by Royal Licence 1829 the name, but not the arms of Monington. He died without issue, and the estate passed to the issue of his sister, Anna Maria, wife of William Thomas Salvin of Croxdale, co. Durham, whose issue sold it to William Worsley Worswick in 1878, and he to its present proprietor in 1891.

He succ. his father 22 Sep. 1253; killed at the Battle of Laab in Marckfeld near Vienna.⁶ [He m. 1, 11 Feb. 1252, Margaret, dau. of Leopold VI, the Glorious, Duke of Austria and Styria, and widow (Feb. 1242) of Henry, crowned King of the Romans, eldest son of the Emperor Frederic II; he repud. her in 1261; she d. in 1267.] (Elder son of Wenzel III, called Ottocar and the One-eyed, King of Bohemia, by Cunegonde, dau. of Philip II, King of the Romans.)

A. 7. Rudolf IV, the Clement, Landgrave of Upper Alsace, Count of Habsburg and Kyburg⁸; b. at the Castle of Limburg in Breisgau; succ. his father 22 Nov. 1240; elected King of the Romans at Frankfurt 29 Sept. 1273; crowned (with his wife) at Aachen 24 Oct. 1273; d. at Gernersheim on the Rhine, bur. in the Cath. Church at Speyer. [He m. 2, at Remiremont, 5 Feb. 1284, Isabel or Elizabeth,⁹ dau. of Hugh IV, Duke of Burgundy; she d. in 1313.] (Eldest son of Albert IV, the Wise, Landgrave of Alsace, Count of Habsburg, by Hedwig, dau. of Ulric, Count of Kyburg.)

A. 8. She took the name of Anne at her coronation; d. at Vienna, bur. in the Cath. Church at Basle 20 March 1281.

A. 9. He was bur. at Kammin. [He m. 1, Matilda or Agnes, dau. of John I, Margrave of Brandenburg.] (Eldest son of Barnim I, the Good, Duke of Pomerania, by his first wife Mary, dau. of Albert I, Duke of Saxony.)

A. 10. (Her mother was Agnes, dau. of Wichman, Count of Ruppín.)

A. 11. He succ. his father 17 Jan. 1278; bur. in the Convent of the nuns of St. Clare at Breslau. (Eldest son of Boleslaw II, the Bald, Duke of Silesia at Liegnitz, by his first wife Hedwig, dau. of Henry, the Elder, Prince of Anhalt.)

A. 12, 14. (Their mother was Helen, dau. of Bela IV, King of Hungary.)

A. 13. He became Duke of Poland on the death of King Przemysl II, 8 Feb. 1295⁵; deposed in 1300; re-established in 1304; took the title of King in 1320. (Third son of Kazimierz, Duke of Cujavia, by his second wife Constance, dau. of Henry II, the Pious, Duke of Silesia.)

B. 1. Henry V, Count of Luxemburg and la Roche, Marquis of Arlon; elected King of the Romans at Rentz near Coblentz 15 Nov. 1308; election confirmed at Frankfort 27 Nov.; crowned at Aachen 6 Jan. 130⁸/₉; crowned King of Lombardy at Milan 6 Jan. 131⁰/₁, and Emperor (as Henry VII) at Rome in the Church of the Lateran 29 June 1312; d. at Buonconvento in Tuscany, bur. in the Cath. Church at Pisa.

B. 2. She was m. (papal dispens. dated 1291¹²), by contract dated Apr. 1292, at the Castle of ter Vueren 28 May 1292; crowned at Milan with her husb.; d. at Genoa.

B. 3. He was crowned at Prague 2 June 1297; elected King of Poland in 1300, but was compelled to resign in 1304. [He m. 2, 1300, Richsa or Elizabeth (b. 1286) only child of Przemysl II, King of Poland; she m. 2, as second wife, in 1306, Rudolf, proclaimed King of Bohemia in 1307, eldest son of the Emperor Albert I, Duke of Austria; she d. in 1335.]

B. 5. He was elected Prince of Rugen in 1325; bur. at Kammin.

B. 7. [He m. 2, 1341, Adelaide, dau. of Henry II, Landgrave of Hesse, whom he repud. He m. 3, 1357, Hedwig or Jadwiga, dau. of Henry V or IX, Duke of Silesia at Glogau and Sagan; she m. 2, 1371, Rupert, Duke of Silesia at Liegnitz, and d. 26 March 1390.]

C. 1. He became Count of Luxemburg, etc, by cession from his father in 1309; King of Bohemia j. ux. in 1310, at the age of 11; crowned (with his wife) at Prague 4 or 5 Feb. 131⁰/₁; slain at the Battle of Crecy, bur. in the Church of the Dominicans at Montargis.¹⁴ [He m. 2, by contract dated at Vincennes Dec. 1334, Beatrice, dau. of Louis I, Duke of Bourbon; she m. 2, as second wife, at Grandvilliers in Lorraine, Eudes, Seigneur de Grancey; she d. 25 Dec. 1383, bur. in the Church of the Jacobins at Paris.]

D. 1. [He m. 1, 1333, Margaret called Blanche, dau. of Charles of France, Count of Valois; she d. 1 Aug. 1348, bur. in the Church of the Castle at Prague. He m. 3, 1353, Anne, only child of Henry II, Duke of Silesia at Jauer; she was crowned 28 July 1353, and d. 11 July 1362.]

⁴ According to L'Art de Vér. les Dates, citing Peter a Thymo, the tournament took place May 3, and the Duke d. the ensuing night.

⁷ L'Art de Vér. les Dates, citing Bohuslaus Balbinus. According to others, she was dau. of "Rossislas, Duke of Bulgaria."

⁸ He styled himself in 1269, "Rudolfus, Comes de Habersburg et de Kiburg, Superioris Alsacie Landgravius;" being the first who used the designation Landgrave of Upper Alsace.

¹² Venerabili in Christo Patri Domino suo Sigifrido Dei gratia Coloniensis Ecclesie Archiepiscopo ac Sacri Imperii per Italiam Archicancellario generali, S. Parisiensis et G. Noviomensis eadam gratia Episcopi, judices cum venerabili patre Episcopo Monasteriensi, super dispensatione inter nobiles personas Henricum Lussemburgensem et Margaretam natam nobilis viri Joannis Lotharingie, Brabantie, et Limburgi Ducis, a sede Apostolica . . . Datum anno 1291. (Charters of Brabant—Butkens, tom. i, preuves p. 127.)

¹³ Of the family, it is said, of the Dukes of Liegnitz: but this is uncertain. (L'Art de Vér. les Dates). She is usually supposed to have been dau. of Henry III or V, though Elizabeth, dau. of that Duke, is otherwise said to have d. unm., Abbess of St. Clare. But she could not have been dau. of his son Henry VI (b. 16 March 1294), as is sometimes stated.

¹⁵ He is said to have m. 2, Adelaide, dau. either (i) of Otto, Duke of Brunswick-Eimbeck, who d. in 1411 (which is impossible); or (ii) of Henry II, Duke of Brunswick-Grubenhagen, who d. in 1337.

¹⁶ Both the dates, 1326 and 1336, assigned for her death, are alike impossible.

¹⁷ He resigned Luxemburg in 1353 to his half-brother Wenceslas, and erected it into a duchy in his favour 13 March [not May] 1354.

Nous desirans et voulans ledit mariage, voulons donnons et octroyons des maintenant as hoirs qui de nous et de ladite damoiselle istront, toute la conte de Chartres . . . Fait au mois de Juignet a Poitiers, l'an de grace mil trois cents et huit. (Du Chesne, M. de Chastillon, preuves p. 163-5, where is also given the text of the dispens. by Clement V,—datum Pictavis, iii idus julii, pontificatus nostri anno tertio).

⁴ His elder br. Rudolf was Count Palatine of the Rhine.

⁵ According to her epitaph. The date given by Anselme (tom. ii, p. 784) is 30 Sep. 1355.

⁸ Tuesday, 7 May, according to the Grandes Chroniques of St. Denis.

⁹ His corpse was carried to the Church of the Dominicans at Poitiers, but, being under excommunication, he could not be buried there: absolution having at length been given by letters from Cardinal Francis, the papal commissioner, dated at Avignon xii kal. apr. 1357, the body was taken to Paris and bur. there in the Church of the Dominicans.

¹⁰ The eldest son Louis was Elector of Brandenburg.

¹¹ He was the first of the House of France to bear the title of Dauphin de Viennois. The Dauphin Humbert II, his only legit. child being dead and his finances greatly embarrassed, by treaty dated 23 Apr. 1343, left his estates, in the event of his dying s.p., to Philip, Duke of Orleans, with remainder to one of the sons of John, Duke of Normandy. But next year, 7 June, by another treaty, he made the Duke of Normandy, or one of his sons, his heir. This was confirmed by two bulls of Clement VI, 9 July and 11 Sep. following—auctoritate tam apostolica quam imperiali, cum imperii regimen, eo vacante, sicut nunc vacat, in nobis et in Romana ecclesia residens noscatur—regarding the Empire as vacant, by reason of the excommunication of Louis of Bavaria. The price of the cession was 120,000 florins d'or and a life pension of 10,000 livres. In 1347 Humbert's wife was dead, and the prospect of his remarriage made it necessary to negotiate with him afresh; for the preceding compacts had only promised an eventual succession. His hands were tied by a new treaty, 30 March 134½; after which, 16 July, at a solemn assembly held at Lyon, "il s'y dessaisit et destestit reellement, corporellement et de fait, desdiz Dalphine . . . et de toutes ses autres terres . . . et ensaisit et vestit reellement, corporellement et de fait, ledit Charles Monsieur, fils ainsne de Monsieur Jehan duc de Normandie, present et acceptant pour li et ses hoirs et successeurs . . . et en signe desdites saisine et dessaisine, bailla audit Charles l'espee ancienne du Dalphine et la banniere saint Georges, qui sont les enseignes anciennes des Dalphins de Viennois, et un ceptre et un anel . . ." On the morrow he took the habit of St. Dominic. To allay the fears of the French Court the Church received him with indecent precipitation. For on Christmas Day, 1350, he was ordained subdeacon, deacon and priest, by Pope Clement VI, at three consecutive masses, and eight days afterwards was consecrated Patriarch of Alexandria. In 1352, he received the Archbishopric of Reims, and 25 Jan. 135½, the Bishopric of Paris: both of which he resigned 22 Feb. following, and retired to the convent of his order at Clermont in Auvergne, where he died 22 May 1355, in his 43rd year. See Valbonnays, Histoire de Dauphiné, Anselme and L'Art de Vér. les Dates in their genealogies of the Dauphins of the House of la Tour du Pin.

¹² The three sons of Stephen I ruled Bavaria in common for many years. But in 1392 they made partition of their inheritance: Stephen becoming Duke at Ingoldstadt, Frederic at Landshut, and John at Munich.

¹³ W. Worcester; Chronicles of St. Denis. Froissart gives Tuesday 1 Nov. [1 Nov. was a Wednesday]. Another date given is 28 Oct.

¹⁴ Anselme. Others say in the Cath. Church (of St. Pierre); or in the Church of St. Urbain.

THE COLONIAL GENTRY. By Sir Bernard Burke, Ulster. Vol. ii. Edited by Ashworth P. Burke. London (Harrison and Sons.) 8vo.

Since the publication of the first volume of this work all genealogists have had to deplore the loss of its accomplished author and initiator Sir Bernard Burke. This volume is issued under the editorship of his son, Mr. Ashworth P. Burke, who has been assisted by his brother Mr. H. Farnham Burke, Somerset Herald, whose heraldic and genealogical skill is duly acknowledged in the preface. He has been consulted on every point of difficulty. We have always been willing to acknowledge the great services rendered by Sir Bernard Burke in popularizing genealogical research, services which were, however, unfortunately marred by the uncritical method which he adopted. We may as well at the outset express our regret that in these days, when no genealogist worthy of the name would dream of printing a pedigree without carefully consulting the records, adding exact dates, and giving proper references, Sir Bernard Burke's sons deem it consistent with their reputation to issue to the public works of this character in which the same loose statements, the same unbridged chasms, and often the same apocryphal legends, sometimes, it is true, tempered with the qualifying "It is said," or "It is probable," appear in edition after edition. Mr. Ashworth Burke has, however, in the present work departed in one very important respect from his father's method, and has made an attempt to distinguish between arms properly borne and those unduly assumed. We quote the following from his Preface. "With respect to the arms attached to the memoirs, those only that I can vouch for are printed in ordinary type; the remainder of the arms, printed in italics, though actually in use, are, I regret to say, borne without authority, and are for the most part mere assumptions of the armorial bearings of families resident in England, Ireland, and Scotland, with whom no relationship is proved." It is somewhat amusing (the absurdity of it does not appear to have struck Mr. Ashworth Burke) to find the son of an eminent King of Arms, and the brother of one of the Heralds in the English College of Arms arrogating to himself the exclusive function of the Kings of Arms, that of disclaiming the usurpers of false heraldic bearings, and that too in his first unaided essay at genealogical and heraldic literature. That Mr. Burke is himself hoisted with his own petard will appear from the frequent instances which we give below, where his adherence to the rule which he has seen fit to make, gives the lie to the statements contained in his pedigrees. The fact is that out of nearly three hundred families treated in this work more than two-thirds are, on his own showing, what the ancient heralds in the exercise of their lawful prerogative would have termed "no gentlemen." We are, moreover, somewhat surprised that Mr. Burke has thought it necessary to swell the dimensions of his book by including the pedigrees not only of colonial Governors and Bishops (who certainly cannot be properly termed colonial gentry), but also those of several Peers and Baronets, and members of the untitled aristocracy whose pedigrees appear already in the Peerage and Baronetage and the Landed Gentry. Neither does any attempt seem to have been made to distinguish between families properly Colonial as being permanently settled abroad, and those who having been out in the Colonies, and made their fortunes there, have returned to enjoy their otium cum dignitate in the mother country. We now proceed to accept the challenge held out in the Preface, and to enumerate a few of the errors and inconsistencies which have occurred to us in perusing this book, many of which will indeed be patent to the merest tyro in the study of family history.

AGNEW OF TASMANIA.—It is a pity that "the earlier records which extend back for four generations" have here been omitted, as had they been given the reader would perhaps have been in a better position to judge of the truth of the claim made to descend from the Agnews of Lochnaw. As it is, the first mentioned ancestor, James Agnew, of "Donegore, barony of Upper Antrim, co. Antrim," died in 1758, and there is no proof whatever of any such descent.

VAIREY.—The derivation of this name is worth reproduction as a fair example of the wild, unsupported and unsupportable statements so frequently to be found in amateur genealogical productions, but which one would have thought the editor of the present work would have known better than to introduce into his pages. "This family claims to be of Norwegian origin, Ari or Ara being a personal name among the Scandinavian nations, and probably settled in Westmorland between the years 945 and 1000, when a body of northmen who had taken possession of the Isle of Man made a descent upon the opposite coast and colonized Cumberland and Westmorland."

AKERMAN OF NATAL.—"It remains a matter of some uncertainty whether this family of Akerman is descended, as some contend, from the Counts Akerman of Bessarabia, or have derived their origin elsewhere." This must, we fear, remain a historic doubt, but we regret to find that Canon Bardsley, in his English Surnames, is so lost to all sense of romance, as to hint at the ploughman rather than the count as the primeval progenitor of this race. Mr. Burke has given us a similar derivation on p. 638, where he tells us that "The family of Horsfall is said to be of foreign extraction, the name being a corruption of d'Orsville or d'Aussville."

ARDEN OF VICTORIA.—This family, Mr. Burke tells us, though he disclaims their right to arms, derives "in direct descent from Siward de Arden (temp. Henry I.), eldest son of Turkill de Warwick, and grandson of Alwys, Earl of Warwick, temp. Edward the Confessor." Now, the first recorded ancestor, Humphrey Arden, of Longcrofts, co. Stafford, died in 1705, and so far from being able to show his descent from Siward de Arden, his descendants are apparently unable even to prove connection with the extinct family of Arden of Park Hall.

BARTON OF NEW SOUTH WALES.—A claim is here made to a descent from John, Barton of Holme, near Newark, and the original probate of his will dated 1490 is, says Mr. Burke, in possession of the family. We cannot, of course, tell how this came about, but we are in a position to challenge the truth of the claim made, the descendants of John Barton of Holme being extinct as the dodo.

BLAKE.—“The founder of this family was Richard Caddell called Niger (from which the surname of Blak or Blake).” Truly an illustration of putting the cart before the horse, for if he were called Black, the nickname would in Latin charters be rendered Niger. The same mistake is made on page 418, where we read that De la Cour was originally “de Curia.”

BONAR OF NEW ZEALAND.—The Hon. James Alexander Bonar is, we observe, still said to be the descendant of Sir Ninian, who fell at Flodden. It is to be regretted that the whole pedigree as given in the 2nd edition of the Landed Gentry has not been reproduced, accompanied by the amusing notes thereon by the late Lyon King of Arms in “Popular Genealogists,” pp. 55-82.

BOWEN OF NEW ZEALAND.—The pedigree of John ap Thomas ap Owen or Bowen is stated to be set forth in the office of Arms at Dublin Castle, but that the colonial family, whose lineage is here given, can prove no descent from him is clear from the fact that their right to arms is not acknowledged. Mr. Burke would have done better to omit the five earlier descents given, for the certain pedigree evidently commences with William Bowen, of Hollymount, co. Mayo, whose younger son is said to have died in 1786.

BOYD OF NEW BRUNSWICK.—This memoir is simply an obituary notice of the late Mr. Boyd, Lt.-Governor of New Brunswick, which often reads as if he were still living, his place of residence even being given.

COLLINS OF NEW ZEALAND.—“This family is descended from the ancient line of Collins of Devon (see Visitation of that co.)” If this statement be true, why does Mr. Burke decline to recognise the right to arms?

DENNISTOUN OF CANADA.—It appears from Irving’s “Book of Dumbartonshire,” that “In 1828, having adduced satisfactory evidence of his descent as heir-male of Sir John de Denzelstoun, Lord of Denzelstoun, he (the father of the colonist) obtained the authority of the Lord Lyon to bear the arms pertaining to the chief of the house.” Why then does Mr. Burke place the arms in italics?

DONALDSON OF NEW SOUTH WALES.—“James Donaldson, third son of Donald, who was third son of Macdonald, Earl of Kintyre. . . . His son, Rev. James Donaldson, of Murrock and Baunachra, of the shire of Dumbarton, b. 1641, d. 1722.” We may as well at once confess our ignorance, emboldened thereto by the fact that the learned editor of The Complete Peerage is in the same boat; we have never even heard of Macdonald, Earl of Kintyre. As, however, his great-grandson died at so comparatively recent a date, his story cannot, of course, be lost in the dimness of prehistoric legend. The noble earl appears to have had no right to heraldic insignia, for those borne by his descendants are not acknowledged by Mr. Burke.

DE SMIDT OF CAPE TOWN.—We are told that the “family of De Smidt was ennobled the 22nd June 1612.” If noble, why without a valid right to arms?

FULTON OF NEW ZEALAND.—Three unproved assumptions seem to be here made. First, that the family was “probably” of Saxon origin; secondly, that they were settled in Ayrshire (there certainly were Fultons in Ayrshire in early times, but as far as this family is concerned, the county may as well be spelt with an “i” instead of a “y”); thirdly, that William Fulton, who went to Ireland and died in 1638 in Kilkenny, was “probably” son of the Rev. Dr. Fulton, who visited Lady Arabella Stuart when a prisoner in the Tower.

GRAEME OF CANADA (recently of Inchbrakie, co. Perth).—The opening paragraph of this pedigree has evidently been composed on the old-fashioned principle, which has done so much to discredit genealogy and heraldry in the minds of sensible men, that any exploded myth, any rubbish in fact, is good enough for family history. We are told that “This ancient family derives its lineage from Graeme, who was made Governor of Scotland and Guardian to the young king, Eugene II. in 435. Graeme broke down the famous wall of Antinous” (sic), &c. King Eugene and his guardian have long been banished from the pages of sober fact, and it is well nigh incredible that a legend, which would now-a-days raise a laugh even in a Board School, should be gravely offered for the credence of our hard-headed colonial cousins. A thousand years are, in pedigrees constructed in this fashion, as one day; thus Mr. Burke passes at once to the athletic hero’s alleged descendant, Sir William Graeme of Kincardine, living 1407, and from him through the Earls of Montrose to Patrick Graeme, who had a charter of the lands of Inchbrakie in 1513.

GRANT OF CAPE COLONY.—This is another instance of inconsistency on the part of the editor. He tells us that the ancestor of Lieut.-Col. James Murray Grant was "Mungo Grant, the son of Grant of Grant," yet he places the arms in italics.

GREY OF NEW ZEALAND.—We very much regret that the pedigree of one of the most distinguished public servants recorded in this volume—Sir George Grey—affords the greatest instance of gratuitous assumption which the book contains. One man is "said" to have had a son, from which supposed son the family under discussion are "said" to descend. On the strength of this double hypothesis, a claim is made to descend from one of the most illustrious houses in England—the Greys of Groby. We have the excellent authority of The Complete Peerage for the fact that Leonard Grey, Viscount Grane, who is here "said to have had a son by his wife, the daughter of the rebel O'Neil," died unmarried.

GROOME OF THE FIJI ISLANDS.—Among the ancestors of this remarkable race are the far-famed Lady of the Lake; Manasseh Ben Israel, "seventy-second in lineal descent from David, King of Israel," who proposed a treaty for the Jews to Cromwell; the Protector himself, through a certain Mary Cromwell, wife of Thomas Groome, of whom, by the way, we do not seem to have heard before; "Mary Gayter, daughter of Mr. de Gatres or Gaeta, of Italy (a nobleman sic), whose family had been some generations settled in England," and Sir Thomas Dickes aide-de-camp to the Duke of Marlborough at the battle of Blenheim. We hold up our hands in astonishment at such a brilliant array of progenitors, and cry "Truth is stranger than fiction."

HUNGERFORD OF NEW SOUTH WALES.—It is somewhat surprising to find a Hungerford descended, according to the statement here made, from the grand old line of Hungerford of Farley, without a valid right to arms. John Hungerford, whose will is quoted, was a man of considerable importance in his day, and one would have thought that with the clue afforded by his will Mr. Burke would have been better able to place the Inehodony family in the Hungerford pedigree.

HUTTON OF NEW ZEALAND.—As the editor has admitted the validity of the arms borne by this family, we presume that he has satisfied himself of the truth of the alleged descent from the Huttons of Hutton Hall, Penrith. The pedigree, however, as given in the 1871 edition of the Landed Gentry, contains no hint of such descent, and merely traces the lineage to "Thomas Howton, of Heaton, owner of land in Treswell, co. Notts, A.D. 1612." It is unfortunate that Mr. Burke has omitted the missing links in the pedigree.

MACMICKING OF NEW SOUTH WALES AND QUEENSLAND.—This pedigree has, we observe, been shorn of much of that wealth of romantic incident which characterised its first appearance in the pages of "the Landed Gentry." This climbing down to comparatively prosaic fact is perhaps due to the complete exposure of some of its pretensions by "Anglo-Scotus" in the Herald and Genealogist, vol. vi, p. 140. Though the mythical Mahun Rusid still makes his appearance, we hear no longer of prehistoric battles or of a chief of Macmicking, Mr. Burke having contented himself with the somewhat tame and purely negative remark that "at various epochs of Scottish history" the family "were not undistinguished." We may add that the very unusual coat of arms borne by the family and acknowledged by Mr. Burke, an illustration of which faces page 704, is not to be found in Mr. Balfour Paul's Ordinary.

MANBEY OF MANITOBA.—After a preliminary statement that this family was included in the last Visitation of London, an assertion which is contradicted by the very modern coat of arms and crest which it now bears, Mr. Burke tells us that the Manbeys do not derive their name from, but conferred it on the place called Manby. All we can say is, that this is very contrary to the usual state of things, and therefore extremely improbable. He proceeds. "It is a cadet of the baronial house of Estoteville, which descends from Robert, Count of Evreux, a son of Richard I, Duke of Normandy, by his second wife, Gunnor, of Denmark." A certain William Manbey of Limehouse, who died 1759, is the first certain ancestor here produced.

MARRYAT OF ADELAIDE.—We are told that this family trace their origin to one of three knights, who came out of Brittany at the period of the Conquest. Sir Bernard Burke used, by the way, to tell us that their names were Rudolphus, Augustin and Gulielmus, and that they came from the town of Marriott, in Normandy, interesting details which are now omitted. There is then a gap to the reign of Elizabeth when Thomas de Marryat, under John Champernon, served with the Huguenots in France, and it is also stated that this Thomas on his return to England settled in Suffolk, notwithstanding that the mention of John Champernon would of itself almost be sufficient to indicate his Devonshire origin. The fact is that the latter part of this lineage contradicts the earlier. The famous Captain Marryat, that delightful friend of our boyhood, who obtained a grant of arms in 1827, is shown to have descended without a break from the above Thomas de Marryat, to whom Henry IV. of France is said to have granted an augmentation to his coat. If this be true, why did his descendant apply for a grant?

ODELL OF NEW BRUNSWICK.—“The Odell family in England is an ancient one, having been founded there by Walter Flandrensis, who came over with the Conqueror in 1066, and, as his share of the spoils of conquest, received among other estates that of Wadehull or Wahull (now Odell) in Bedfordshire.” All this may be true, but that William Odell, the founder of a family that emigrated to America in 1639, was descended from Walter Flandrensis and the ancient Barons de Wahull is another matter. We perceive that Mr. Burke is also of this opinion, for he has refused to recognise the right to coat armour. This is one of those cases where a biographical account is given of a gentleman who is dead, his residences and even his clubs being stated.

PERCEVAL OF NEW ZEALAND.—After a page and more of the early pedigree of the ancient line of De Perceval Mr. Burke passes to the Percivals of Knightsbrook, from which family Sir Westby Brook Perceval is descended, and quotes the following from Sir William Betham, Ulster King of Arms:—“We have not the intermediate generations between this Sir William de Percival (of Moricetown) and Christopher, the first in the Knightsbrook line.” Sir William of Moricetown, be it remembered, was living 1347, and Christopher’s will was proved 1607. The pedigree has now been carried two generations beyond Christopher Percival, but unfortunately the fresh information tends rather to induce an impartial critic to doubt the alleged descent from Sir William of Moricetown. Christopher turns out to have been son of a certain Gabriel Percival, of St. Margaret’s, London Bridge, who left a widow, Elizabeth, buried at Richmond, in Surrey, in 1595, while Gabriel’s father was John Percival, of St. Sepulchre’s, London, whose will, proved in London, 1538, shows not the slightest connection with Ireland.

RAWSON OF QUEENSLAND.—“The Rawsons are a very ancient family, for many generations settled in Yorkshire, in the Heralds Visitations of which county their pedigree is amply set forth.” Yet Mr. Burke has disclaimed their right to arms! Although on his own showing not armigerous, he has, in his Preface, instanced these Rawsons as one of those “well-known and distinguished families at home,” who “have sent their younger sons to win their spurs in the Colonies, and to add new lustre to the family renown.”

SMITH (Bishop of Sydney).—“This family claims descent from the ancient and distinguished house of Smith (formerly Heriz) of Withcote, co. Leicester From Henry Smith, the notorious regicide, the last of the family who possessed Withcote, is said to have been descended Henry Smith, of Great Hautbois in the parish of Coltishall, co. Norfolk, buried at Coltishall, 2nd October, 1743.” It is really too bad to put such an apocryphal statement into the mouth of the Primate of Australia, for, as it happens, very good evidence is in our possession that Henry Smith, the regicide, left only one child, a daughter, Mary, wife of George Tussingham, gent.

TINDAL, LATE OF NEW SOUTH WALES.—There is not the slightest proof of the alleged descent of this Devonshire family from the Tyndales, of Langley Castle, in Northumberland. The coat of arms, of which an illustration is given to face page 608, is of itself sufficient to refute any such claim.

TWINING OF CANADA.—“The registers at Twining, and those at Painswick and Pershore make frequent reference to the TWININGS, of Twining, to the year 1800, the earliest record being that of Thomas Twining, of Tewkesbury, who was b. 1360.” There is no misprint—Thomas Twining’s will is “dated 1412.” We are eager for a sight of these wonderful registers, which must go back nearly two hundred years before the institution of parish registers in England.

WELD.—The remarks which we have felt called upon to make under Graeme apply with equal force to the ridiculous quotation from Guillim here given, where the Welds are said to be “lineally descended from Edric Sylvaticus alias Wild, a Saxon of great renown in the reigns of King Harold and William the Conqueror, whose father Alfric was brother to Edrick, of Stratton, Duke of Mercia.” Mr. Burke gravely adds the several descents from Edric Sylvaticus to “William Weld, sheriff of London, 25 Edward III, settled at Eaton, co. Chester.” Over four pages are taken up with this lineage which, considering that Sir Frederick Aloysius

Weld is dead, and his children apparently settled in England, and that the pedigree has appeared in several editions of the Landed Gentry, might well have been omitted.

WOLFE OF WESTERN AUSTRALIA.—“This family is of great antiquity, and has not been undistinguished. The military achievements of one of its descendants, Major-General James Wolfe, the illustrious hero of Quebec, conferred on the name a glorious pre-eminence in the records of British renown.” On reading this sentence we almost hoped that at last the problem as to the ancestry of General Wolfe had been solved, but we were doomed to disappointment, for his name does not again appear upon the pedigree. We quote the following from the Appendix to Colonel R. T. Wolfe’s interesting little work on “The Wolfes of Forenaghts.” “There are, perhaps, few of our illustrious characters, if any, born within the last two centuries respecting whose ancestry so little is known than is that of the hero of Quebec; every effort would seem to have been made within the last century to discover definitely from what source he was derived.”

WOLLASTON OF MELBOURNE.—This is another of Mr. Burke’s “well known and distinguished families at home,” who “have sent their younger sons to win their spurs in the Colonies and to add new lustre to the family renown.” It therefore at first sight strikes us as somewhat astonishing to find that he does not acknowledge their right to the arms which they have assumed, but it is still more surprising on closer inspection to discover that there is a very serious break in the pedigree. We will not attempt to enquire into the accuracy of the document quoted by Mr. Burke, and written by William Wollaston, of Finborough, in 1753, for without the evidences upon which it is based this would be an idle task, but we will confine our attention to that branch of the family which was settled at Trescot Grange in the parish of Over Penne, co. Stafford, with which the detailed pedigree commences. Fortunately dates have in this instance been given to us, and we have therefore been able to detect a very false assumption that has been made. William Wollaston, of Trescot, (younger son of Thomas Wollaston, of Perton, who lived temp. Hen. VII) had an elder son, William, of Trescot Grange, which William had two sons, Hugh and Thomas. The younger of these sons, Thomas Wollaston, is “supposed” to be father of a certain Walter Wollaston, of Bishops’ Castle, co. Salop, from whom the Colonial family derive. Now that this supposition rests on no sound basis of truth appears from the fact that on the 20th June, 1600, administration of the goods of this Thomas Wollaston (described as of Trescot Grange) was granted to his brother Hugh. The will of the latter mentions no relative named Walter. After this we are not surprised to find that the motto of the Wollastons, of Shenton, Ne quid falsi, has not been assumed by the family in Australia together with the arms.

WRAY OF NEW ZEALAND.—Captain Henry Wray, R.N., the grandfather of the present Mr. Charles Allen Wray, is only “said” to descend from William Wray, of Ards, “the last of the family who reigned at that place” (we know not if a pun be intended, or if the Wrays held sovereign sway at Ards). Mr. Burke has disclaimed the right to arms.

Notes and Queries.

SIR WALTER MANNY.—The parentage of this distinguished warrior (save that his father was known as “le Borgne”) was unfortunately not discovered by the late Mr. Beltz, when he compiled his history of the Order of the Garter. It is, however, on record. Carpentier in his “Histoire des Pais-bas,” part iii, p. 756, quotes the following epitaph, from the collections of Rosel, as once existing in the Church of the Franciscans at Valenciennes. En cheste arcure gesit noeble Chevaliers Messires Jehans dit le Borgne de Mangny, pere a Monsignor Watiers qui fit merveilles en armes aux guerres des Anglois. Cil Jehans triespassa li an MCCCXLVI, li XV de Marche. Sir Walter's mother was Jane de Jenlain, of a family of Hainault, of which I know nothing more than that their arms were, Sable biletée and a lion rampant Or. There is a charter of date 1370, given by the same Carpentier, commencing, "Nous Watiers Sires de Mauny;" it appears therefore that he was head of the family. On the seal [Or] 3 chevrons [Sable], SIGILLUM WALTERI DE MAINY.

G. W. WATSON.

THE ORIGIN OF THE THYNNES (Vol. xi, p. 193).—I have great doubts of the derivation "At th' Inn." From time to time I have collected very many instances of surnames commencing with "a," "at," "atte," or "atle," but have never come across one ending with inn or hostel. I think a man who kept an hostel would have always been called Le Hosteller. Why in this case should we not take the clue given us by Collins, who in his Peerage mentions William le Thynne of Stratton in 1515? It is probably a corruption from "le Theyn." Reginald le Teinus was of Cornwall in 1201 (Selden Soc. Select Pleas). Nicholas Theyn, who was parson of a mediety of the Church of Bradfield (Norf.) so wrote his name in his will dated 1373 (Reg. Heydon, fo. 27a), but he is described as Nicholas Thyn in the list of incumbents of Bradfield given in Blom. Norf., xi, p. 7. The name is still plentiful with us in East Norfolk, but has been corrupted into "Thaine." Elsewhere as early as 1259 we find Roger le Theyn in Somerset and Juliana le Then in Wilts (Excerpta e Rot. Fin.), and again Richard le Theyn in 24 Ed. I (Somerset Fines, p. 297). By the way, Burke makes out "of the Inn" meant of one of the Inns of Court, and Collins that it meant of the Inn, a mansion in Stretton, Salop. Both cannot be right. If there was ever such a name as "at the Inn" or "of the Inn," how is it we do not find it in its primal form in any Calendar, e.g., in Mr. Smith's admirable Index to the Prerogative Wills? Again, if Thynne was a byename of the Botteilles, why does it not occur in any of the Inquisitions of the Botteville family?

WALTER RYE.

FOX FAMILY.—I shall be much obliged for information as to the parentage of Colonel Edward Fox who commanded the 5th Marines 1702-4. He was senior military officer in command of H.M. forces at the capture of Gibraltar, and it was to him that the keys of that fortress were surrendered; he was subsequently killed there during the siege of the place by the Franco-Spanish forces on the 9th November of the same year. In his will dated 13th April 1704, proved P.C.C. 18th January 1705 (Gee 10), he is described as "Edward Fox of the parish of St James', co Mid., Col. of one of H.M. Regts of Marines."

Is any list known to be extant of Normans who came to England during the first eighty years after the Conquest, and obtained lands by grant or otherwise? I am especially interested in those who possessed lands in East Cheshire.

A BRISTOL ANCESTOR OF THE DUKES OF SOMERSET.

Of misreadings there appears to be no end. A remarkable one was perpetuated by the late Sir Thomas Hardy, who, in his edition of Le Neve's Fasti Ecclesie Anglicanæ (3 vols. 8vo. 1854), followed his author literally by giving under BISHOPS OF BATH; "Savaricus, sur-named Barlowinwac." Bishop Stubbs has shown that in the attestation of some document Savaric's (rather Savary) name was followed by that of Baldwin Wac (or Wake, as afterwards written), which has been turned into Barlowinwac. When then Burke's Peerage has the surname "MacWilliams"—the final s is a misprint—under SOMERSET in the notice of Sir John Seymour, who married "Isabel dau. and heir of William MacWilliams Esq. co. Gloucester," we may reasonably ask whether the name is correctly written. As a surname, it seems to be uncommon, for at the present moment the Post Office London Directory furnishes one MacWilliam only in each of its "Commercial" and "Court" sections. There were undoubtedly Mackwilliams in Essex during the reign of Edward the Fourth, if not earlier; and Morant (Essex ii. 356) follows Leland in saying that the family came from Ireland, and he sets out a pedigree which shows a William Mackwilliam "who had an only daughter, Isabella, who became wife to Sir John Seymour of Even Swindon in Wiltshire. From this match" (he goes on) "proceeded the Seymours, Dukes of Somerset."

Really the ancestor of the Seymours, Dukes of Somerset, turns out to have been one MARK WILLIAM, merchant and burgess of Bristol, and sometime Mayor of that town. The facts connected with the marriage of his daughter and heir appear upon record of a suit in the Court of Common Pleas [De Banco (659), Mich. 4 Hen. VI. m. 437], by which John Borton of Bristol, merchant, was summoned to answer to Thomas Stamford for non-delivery of two writings obligatory, consigned to him at Bristol for safe custody on the 29th of July 2 Hen. VI. (1424). By these, Mark William above-named, and this Thomas Stamford were bound, each to the other, in the sum of £400. Disputes had been of long standing between them; but, by mediation of friends, it was settled that both parties should submit themselves to arbitration. The arbitrators, thereupon appointed by mutual consent, directed that the disputants should appear before them in person, on Tuesday (22 Aug. 1424) before the feast of S. Bartholomew following the delivery of the writings before mentioned, at eight o'clock of the forenoon, in the chapel of S. Mary upon Avon (here Avene) Bridge. Each was required to put in writing his complaints and causes of debate, and in presence of the arbitrators to read and declare them to the other, who was then and there to make his answer. First, Stamford was to have his turn on the Tuesday, and then Mark on the Wednesday.

Certain grievances were set forth by Stamford, until finally he demanded amends for the broken agreement, whereby Mark William and Agnes, his wife, granted that he should marry Isabel, their daughter, when she should arrive at marriageable age; and that the reversion of certain lands and tenements, lately devised in his will by John Droys to Isabel, his wife, for her life, and ordered by the testator to be sold by his executors, should come to Thomas Stamford and Isabel (daughter of Mark) William and the heirs of their bodies; remainder, in default, to Robert, son of Mark, and the heirs of his body; remainder, in default, to the right heirs of Thomas Stamford in fee simple. And of other lands and tenements purchased, or to be purchased, by Mark, feoffment was to be made to the use of Mark and Agnes for life; remainder of one moiety to the said Thomas and Isabel, and of the other to Robert, son of Mark.

Afterwards Stamford came to the house in which dwelt Mark William, who was then in office as Mayor of Bristol, and had a personal conference with him touching the intended marriage. Recognizing that, as Robert son of Mark was dead, and Isabel, his daughter, was now his heir-apparent, and so her marriage had become more valuable (grandius) than it was at the time of making the contract, he desired to be frankly told, whether or not the father would stand to the agreement. If yes, then Stamford requested Mark to assure him at what date his daughter would arrive at marriageable age, and when the espousals between himself and Isabel should be celebrated. The other replied that he would consider the matter, and talk it over with his wife and daughter. On the third day after this conversation, that is to say, after Easter in the first year of the now king's reign (April 1423), Mark and Agnes, his wife, in an interview with the suitor, held to the understanding previously had, and fully agreed (concordarunt in certo) that the espousals should be fulfilled between Thomas Stamford and Isabel, daughter of Mark, at the feast of Easter in the third year of the king (8 April 1425). Notwithstanding this explicit promise, thus renewed after mature deliberation, Mark William had fraudulently and deceitfully caused the said Isabel to be married to one John Seymour on the 30th of July in the second year (1424).

As the proceedings, which are set out at extreme length, present no further point of interest, it is sufficient to state the result of the suit against Borton, in the course of which the whole of these questions and others were raised. On the 24th of April, 4th year (1426), John Borton delivered in Court to Thomas Stamford the writing obligatory in which he was bound to Mark William in £400. Subsequently, before John Juyn, Chief Baron of the Exchequer, and Richard Morgan, sitting at Bristol, the jury found that the two writings obligatory were delivered to Borton on the conditions alleged by Mark William; and they assessed his (Mark) damages against Thomas Stamford for delay caused in the delivery of the bond at 60 shillings, to which the Bench added 40 shillings, making 100 shillings in all. On the 23rd January, 6 Hen. VI, 1427-8, Borton delivered in Court to Mark the writing by which he was bound to Stamford.

Isabel Seymour survived her husband for many years. Concerning her, the late Rev. T. P. Wadley—whose name is familiar as a valuable contributor to this magazine, and to whose unvarying kindness and readiness to procure any local information at Worcester, I bear very willing testimony—in his¹ “Notes of Bristol Wills” records this interesting fact. (p. 144):—

"Bishop Carpenter's register at Worcester vol. i., folio 192, states that Isabel Seymour, widow, took the vow of perpetual chastity in the collegiate church of Westbury, inter missar' solemnia, in the presence of the said bishop, who gave her his benediction, and put upon her the vidual vesture, June 3rd, 1465."

She died about twenty years after, namely, on 14 April 1485; as appears by several inquisitions taken after her death (2 Ric. III. no. 38). She was possessed in fee of divers messuages, cottages and gardens in the town and suburbs of Bristol; and held in dower, or by joint feoffment with her late husband, Sir John Seymour, various land in cos. Southampton, Wilts, Hereford and Somerset. Her heir was found to be her grandson, John Seymour of Wolfhale in Wilts, esquire, who at the time of her death was aged thirty four years. His father and mother had both predeceased his grandmother, Dame Isabel Seymour; the father, John Seymour, also of Wolfhale, dying 29 Sept. 1463, the mother (Elizabeth), 19 April 1472. JOHN A. C. VINCENT.

THE ORIGIN OF THE LINDSAYS.

Sir George Sitwell's interesting paper (supra, p. 1) deals with a subject to which I have myself devoted considerable attention.

My researches had made me acquainted with all Sir George's evidences, except the mention of "Billeheld uxor Baldrici" in a St. Werburgh's charter. But this, of course, is of cardinal importance as connecting with Cheshire the house of Bocquencé. It may fairly be presumed (though it is not proved) that her husband was, as Sir George asserts, the Baldric who held "Cocle," in Cheshire, of the earl.

The difficulty lies, it seems to me, in Sir George's assumption that Baldric, the earl's tenant in Cheshire, was, of necessity, identical with Baldric, his tenant in Lindsey. In his well-known "Barons of Pulford" a similar identification is made the subject of elaborate argument and proved by careful research. In the case of Baldric, a presumption would, no doubt exist, if it were not for the very document Sir George quotes in extenso in his paper. It is difficult to derive from it any other impression than that Robert and Baldric were the only sons of Billeheld,¹ yet the sons we require for the Lindsays are Richard and Walter. I had hoped that Sir George's paper would remove this difficulty, but this can only be done by connecting the Cheshire property, in its descent, with the Lincolnshire line. Till this is done, I venture to think that (as I previously suggested to my friend Windsor Herald) the peculiar derivation of the name from a district, not from a village, may perhaps be accounted for by the Baldric who held of the earl in Lindsey being distinguished from this Cheshire namesake as Baldric "de Lindissi."

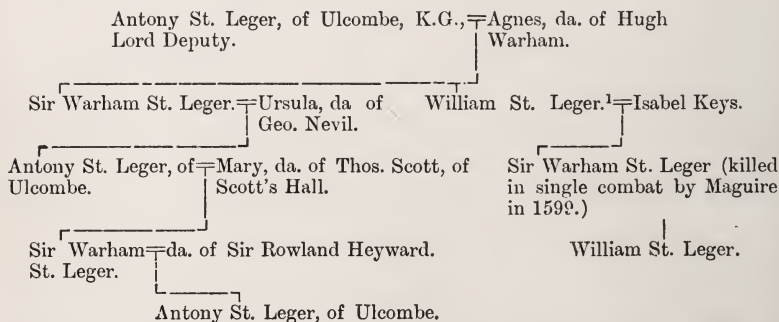

I may add that I have recently examined the St. Evroul cartulary at Paris and can find nothing in it affording further light. The charter witnessed by Richard, son of Baldric "de Lindissi," must belong to 1121-1129.

J. H. ROUND.

ROYAL DESCENT OF KINGSMILL.

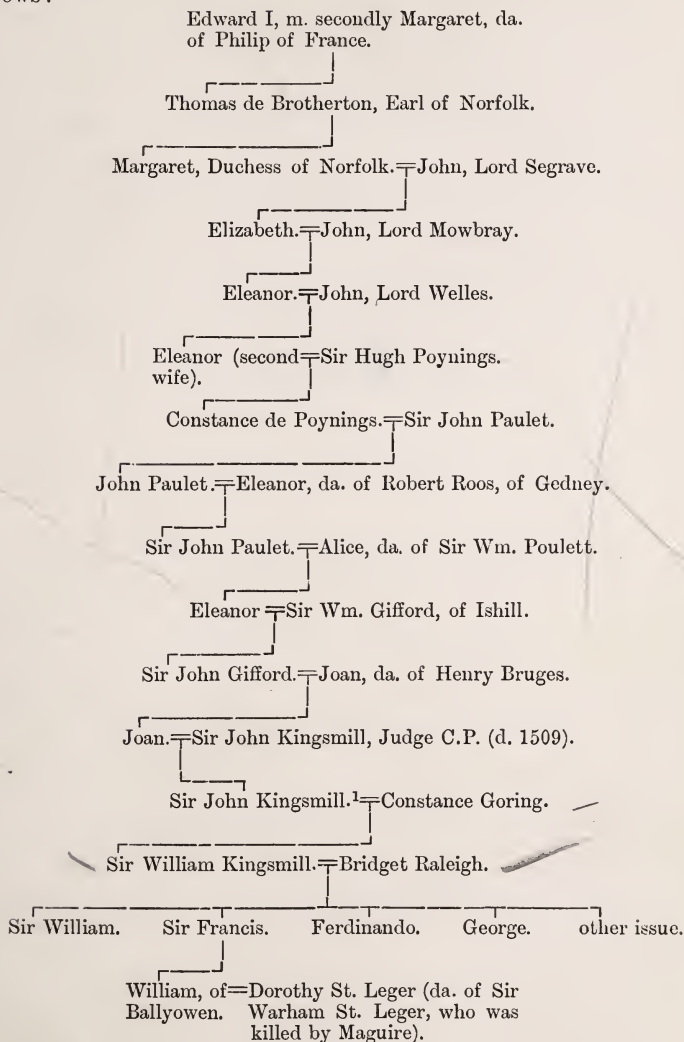

Several families (including those of Lords Carlingford, Ardilaun, and Charlemont) descended from William Kingsmill, of Ballyowen, claim royal descent through his marriage with Dorothy, daughter of Sir Warham St. Leger, assumed to be the same Sir Warham who married Ursula Nevil, daughter of George Nevil, third Lord Bergavenny. The alleged descent is printed in full in Burke's "Royal and Noble Families" (No. 219), "Pedigree of Guinness." It is, however, wrecked in the first instance by chronological considerations. Ursula Nevil's daughter Anne, or Agnes, who married Thomas Digges, died in 1636, aged 81, as appears from her epitaph quoted in Collins' "Pecrage" (under Clermont), from Le Neve's "Monumenta," vol. i, p. 170. She was born therefore in 1555. Now William Kingsmill was son of Sir Francis, who was captain in Queen Elizabeth's army in Ireland in 1600, and whose eldest brother, Sir William, was born in 1557 ("Notes and Queries," 3^d Ser., vol. i, p. 376). Berry in his "Hants Genealogies" makes Francis the sixth son of the first Sir William, William being the eldest. It is hardly possible that William Kingsmill should marry a lady whose full sister was many years older than his own father. But what is still more conclusive is that Dorothy, widow of William Kingsmill, was living in 1675, when she was party to a suit in which Lord Massereene was plaintiff. (Appendix to Sixth Report of the Deputy Keeper of the Records in Ireland, p. 62). The solution of the difficulty is supplied by a brief MS. pedigree in the Office of Arms, Dublin ("Pedigrees," vol. v, p. 138), written in the seventeenth century, from which I make an extract:—

This last Sir William St. Leger was Lord President of Munster, and it is certain that William Kingsmill's wife was his sister, for in the histories of the time it is stated that in 1641 "the rabble plundered Mr. Wm. Kingsmill, of Ballyowen, brother-in-law of the Lord President." (Smith's "History of Cork," ii. 114). It is clear, therefore, that the uncle and nephew have been confounded in the published pedigrees:

¹ Eldest son, but disinherited. In the pedigree of Lord Doneraile in Burke, this line is given correctly according to the MS. here cited.

However, I am able to trace a royal descent, which includes all the families interested in this fallacious one and others besides. It is as follows :—

Lord Mowbray, whose da. married Lord Welles, was descended from Henry III, his mother being a daughter of Henry Plantagenet, Earl of Lancaster. My authorities are, for the earlier steps, Doyle's "Official Baronage," for the Poynings links, the Poynings genealogy in the

"Sussex Archæological Collections," vol. xv; for the Paulet links the genealogy of the Marquis of Winchester in Burke, and for those that follow, Berry's "Hants Genealogies."

The three brothers, Francis, Ferdinando, and George were all serving in the Queen's army in Ireland about 1594-1610. John, said to be a cousin, obtained a grant of land in Donegal in 1612. A Rev. Antony Kingsmill, B.A., Cantab. 1598, ordained 1599 (son of Rev. Antony, Vicar of Milton), having been collated to the Prebend of Cahirultan in 1599, was in 1639 or 1640 appointed Rector of Mallow.¹ Mallow had been granted by Queen Elizabeth to Sir Thomas Norreys, who m. Bridget, daughter of Sir William Kingsmill (the second). On his death in 1599 the property passed to his son-in-law, Sir John Jephson. The patronage of the living belonged to his representatives when the Irish Church was disestablished. A daughter of Sir Francis Kingsmill m. firstly "an Irish esquire," and secondly Mr. St. Michel, by whom she was mother of Sam. Pepys' wife. Is it known who the Irish esquire was?

THOMAS KINGSMILL ABBOTT, B.D., LITT. D.

A DEED RELATING TO THE CONVENT OF ST. CATHERINE OF SIENNA, NEAR EDINBURGH.

Communicated by J. G. WALLACE-JAMES.

The Convent of St. Catherine of Sienna, near Edinburgh, was one of the last Religious Houses to be founded, before the Reformation introduced a new order of affairs in Scotland. The chief founder was Lady Janet Hepburn, daughter of Patrick, Earl of Bothwell, and widow of George, fifth Lord Setoun, who fell at Flodden. The land on which the Monastery stood was the gift of Sir John Crawford, Canon of St. Giles, and of John Cant, a burgess of Edinburgh, and Agnes Carkettle, his spouse. The Sisters of the Sheens, as the Nuns were called, bore a high character for piety and virtue. Sir David Lindsay, who was not sparing of his satire on the vices of the religious, says of this house that Chastity—

Thaire hes scho found hir mother Povertie
And devotioun her awin sister Carnall
There hes scho found Faith. Hope and Charitie
Togidder with the Virtues Cardinall
Thare hes scho, found ane Convent yit unthrall
To dame Sensuall, nor with ryches abusit
So quietlye those ladyis bene inclusit.

¹ These dates are from Cotton's Fasti. If they are correct the patron was then the son of Sir John Jephson (who died 1638); or perhaps the true date was 1638. Mallow is certain, for his claim for compensation for losses by the rebels in 1641 exists in Trinity College Library. Cotton, who is uncertain about Mallow, was not aware of this.

The family of Carkettle was an opulent and very important one in the Burgh of Edinburgh, and at one time or another owned Overlibertoun in Midlothian, Forglen in Peebles, and Markle in East Lothian.

The following deed illustrates a usual family arrangement by which a daughter got a settlement in life by becoming a professed sister in a Convent—

A LIST OF FUNERAL CERTIFICATES.

The following list of Funeral Certificates¹ applies only to those which have been printed or referred to in printed works, in which latter case the name is set in italics. To save space the letters "A, B, C," &c., are used to denote certain works (as under) which contain or refer to many such entries, such letters being followed by "I, II," &c., to denote the volume when the work is in more than one volume, and by the page when the work is of a miscellaneous character, e.g., "D, III, 286," stands for "Coll. Top. et Gen., vol. iii, p. 286."

The several works thus indicated are as under—

- "A" denotes "Observations on parish registers," by R. Bigland, 4to, 1764, a small volume containing 16 funeral certificates which is, apparently, the first printed work that calls attention to them.
- "B" denotes vol. vi. of "The Record Society for Lancashire and Cheshire" [1882], edited (with the greatest ability) by J. P. Rylands, F.S.A., and containing no less than 285 Cheshire and 12 Lancashire certificates, 1600 to 1678.
- "C" denotes No. lxxv. of "The Chetham Society Publications" [1869], containing 12 Lancashire certificates, with copious and most interesting notes on them by the editors, "T. W. King, Esq., F.S.A., York Herald," and "the Rev. F. R. Raines, M.A., F.S.A."
- "D" denotes "Collectanea Topographica et Genealogica," edited by J. G. Nichols, F.S.A., 8 vols., 1834—1843

¹ Funeral certificates were instituted by order of the Earl Marshal, 18 July 1568, which order is set forth in "C," page 1, where (p. v) as also in "B" (pp. v-xxiii) and in "D" (iii, 236), is some account of them, the author stating that "they continue to the close of the following century: after which period they gradually fell into disuse." Certain State funerals, however, (e.g., those of Nelson, Wellington, &c.), are of their character. Some account of the numerous entries of these certificates, which exist in the records of the College of Arms, as also of those at the British Museum, &c., is in Sims's "Manual for the Genealogist" (1856), pp. 284—286, tho' the "early funerals" from 1550 to 1563 (mentioned in "D" iv, p. 111), in the "MS. Cotton, Vitellius, F. v.," and others (mentioned therein, p. 371) are omitted.

“E” denotes “The Topographer and Genealogist,” edited as above, 3 vols., 1846—1858.

“F” denotes “The Herald and Genealogist,” edited as above, 8 vols., 1863—1874.

“G” denotes “The Genealogist,” but, inasmuch as there are two series thereof, “G^a” denotes the original series ed. by G. W. Marshall, LL.D., F.S.A., 7 vols., 1877—1883.

“G^b” denotes the second series thereof, ed. successively by W. D. Selby, K. W. Murray, and H. W. F. Harwood, of which there are (up to this date of 1895) 11 vols., 1884—1895.

“H” denotes the “Miscellanea Genealogica et Heraldica,” ed. by J. J. Howard, LL.D., F.S.A., but, inasmuch as there are three series thereof, “H^a” denotes the original series thereof, 2 vols., 1866—76.

“H^b” denotes the “New Series” thereof, 4 vols., 1874—84.

“H^c” denotes the “Second Series” thereof of which there are (up to this date of 1895) 5 vols., 1886—94.

In these eleven vols. there are above 120 funeral certificates, which, in many cases, are accompanied with extracts from wills, parish registers, pedigrees, &c., illustrating the persons commemorated.

“J” denotes the “London and Middlesex Note Book,” ed. by W. P. W. Phillimore, M.A., B.C.L., containing (inter alia) an account (by G. E. C.) of the Lord Mayors and Sheriffs of London from 1602 to 1618, with many references to funeral certificates in the College of Arms, referring to them and their descendants.

“K” denotes the “Roman Catholic families of England based on the Lawson MSS.,” ed. by J. J. Howard, LL.D., F.S.A., of which five families (Arundell, Fermor, Hunloke, Petre, and Phelips), have (up to this date of 1895) been issued.

“L” denotes the list of funeral certificates given in “G^b, II, 87,” as being contained in “State Papers, Domestic, 1647, bundle 324, No. 1.”

“M” denotes the list given in “D, IV, 384,” as being contained in “Harl. MS., 1368, accompanied by pedigrees.”

¹ It may be noted, as a fact interesting, and little known even to Old Rugbeians, that the Rev. J. N. Simpkinson had a share in the authorships of the chapter on "School Life at Rugby," in Stanley's Life and Correspondence of Dr. Arnold (1844). He published a Memoir of the Rev. George Wagner, 1858; and The Washingtons: a Tale of a Country Parish in the Seventeenth Century, 1860. And the following articles contributed to the Edinburgh Review were from his pen (1) Church Expansion and Liturgical Revision, Jan. 1861; (2) Dr. Hessey's Bampton Lectures, Oct. 1861; (3) Clerical Subscription, April 1862; (4) Modern Judaism, Jan. 1863; (5) Dean Milman and Dean Stanley on Jewish History, Jan. 1864; (6) Dictionaries of the Bible (Smith and Kittó), Jan. 1865; (7) Amendment of the Anglican Rubric, Oct. 1867; (8) The Apocryphal Gospels, July 1868; (9) Arnold on Puritanism and National Churches, April 1871; (10) Tyerman's Life of John Wesley, Jan. 1872.

² Author of Life and Times of Archbishop Laud, 1894.

This family is noticeable for three brothers who distinguished themselves in the time of Peter the Great.

(1) The first, Abraham Paulovitch, an employé in the ambassadorial department, was sent in 1709 to the Court of Denmark, with a letter announcing the victory of Poltava. In 1715 his sovereign sent him to Vienna as Resident. In 1719 the Emperor Charles VI, having concluded with England and Poland a treaty bearing adversely on Russia, ordered Wesselowski to quit Vienna within eight days, not even granting him a farewell audience. In the same year Peter the Great appointed him Resident Ambassador at the Court of the Landgrave of Hesse-Cassel, but after a month recalled him to Russia. At that time he was at Berlin, but the news of the execution of the accomplices in the flight of the Tsarevitch, Alexis Petrovitch, so alarmed him that he fled secretly from thence, and, in spite of all efforts to discover him, the place of his retreat long remained unknown. Having fallen under suspicion of sheltering Alexis in the dominions of the German Emperor, he found it prudent to condemn himself to perpetual exile. An attempt to arrest him, when discovered, was made by one Vazujsenski, under order from the Tsar; but the Landgrave of Hesse-Cassel refused to allow his surrender.

We obtain a glimpse of Abraham at Geneva in the Memoirs of the Princess Dashkoff, an English translation of which by Mrs. Bradford, was published in London, in 1840. (Ch. Vol. i, p. 182)

(2) Isaac Paulovitch, like his elder brother, entered the diplomatic service. On the fall of his protector, Prince Menshikoff, he was apprehended, and subjected to examination, but defended himself successfully. He is afterwards found in Persia. In 1732, he appears as an assessor in the office of General Bibikof, in the city of Baku, and later on amongst the instructors of the heir to the throne, the Grand Duke Peter Theodorovitch. He enjoyed the favour of the Empress Anna Petrovna, worked his way to the rank of Privy Councillor, and in 1746 received the order of St. Alexander Newski. After becoming a member of the Imperial College of Foreign Affairs, he died in September, 1754, at an advanced age.

(3) Theodore Paulovitch Wesselowski began his career in the ambassadorial department as Secretary of the Embassy to Rome with Prince Boris Kurakin in 1707. It is remarkable that at an audience they both kissed the Pope's foot. He followed Prince Kurakin, when the latter was appointed Minister Plenipotentiary to the Court of St. James', and in 1713 was Secretary of Legation to Holland, when the Prince was named Minister there. Thence he went to Brunswick in 1714, and to London in 1716, where, on the recall of the Russian Ambassador Extraordinary, Baron Strak, he was ordered to remain and take the direction of the Legation, and on the 9th of July, 1717, he was appointed Resident Ambassador. According to an article in a Russian Dictionary of Biography, "The English clergy having made propositions to Peter the Great for the union of their Church with the Russian, and also having communicated with the Patriarch of Alexandria as to union with the Eastern Church, under the title of 'The United Orthodox Apostolic Church,' Wesselowski availed himself of the opportunity for the erection of a Greek Church in London."

If the latter statement have any foundation of truth, the building has not, so far, been identified. The scheme of the Nonjurors for uniting themselves to the Eastern Church originated in 1716, when Arsenius, Archbishop of Thebais, was in London, soliciting assistance for his co-religionists in Alexandria. In 1717, a letter was sent by the Nonjuring Clergy to the "Czar of Muscovy," and a long correspondence ensued between them and the Greek Bishops, but the negotiations were fruitless, and came to an end on the death of the Tsar in 1725. (See Lathbury's History of the Nonjurors, London, 1843.) In 1719, the friendly relations between England and Russia were cut short, and in 1720 Wesselowski was superseded, and ordered to go as Secretary of Legation to Copenhagen. But it appears that, being suspected on his brother's account, and his successor, Michael Bestujef, having been charged to discover whether Abraham was not hidden away in London, he refused to quit England. After the death of Peter the Great, he returned to Russia, and in 1744 he was the bearer of a letter to the Duke of Anhalt-Zerbst from the Empress Elisabetha Petrovna; in 1748 he appears as Master of the Ceremonies to the Imperial Court; in 1760 as General-Major and Curator in the University of Moscow. In 1761 he received the order of St. Alexander Newski; and in October, 1762, was at his own request discharged from the Imperial service with the rank of Privy Councillor, and a pension of 2,000 roubles per ann. The year of his death is not known. Two printed documents, which emanated from him, are preserved in the British Museum (1) Mémoire présentée à sa Majesté Britannique par M. Wesselowski, Ministre de sa Majesté Czarienne, 1717; (2) A Memorial presented to the King of Great Britain by M. Wesselowski, the Czar's Resident in London, on the 14th Dec. 1719. His Majesty's Answer, &c. (London, 8vo., 1720.)

³ As Count of Champagne and Brie jure uxoris, Earl Edmund performed homage to the Duke of Burgundy at Bar-sur-Seine, 3 Feb. 1279.

⁴ Chaurces, Chaources, Chources, Chourches—the name was spelt all manner of ways—an illustrious house of Maine; a Caortiis, Cenomanensis pagi castello, says Père Sermond in his notes on the letters of Geoffrey, Abbot of Vendôme: Caortiis being corrupted from Cadurciis. English genealogists write it Chaworth, the modern name evolved from a still more corrupt latin form in use as early as 1297. The forms Chaurces, Chauorcis, Chauvrces, Chauwerc, Chauwure, from records temp. John, shew how the change took place. The name is given as Chaurces in the "Barons' letter to the Pope," and often in the Rolls of Arms of the 13th century as Chaus. Mr. Eytton (Her. and Gen., vol. vi, p. 246) and Sir Henry Barkly (Gen., N.S., vol. v, p. 211), misled by a specious identity, derive the name of this family from Cahors (urbs Cadurci), the capital of Quercy. In 1151, Patry de Chourches founded the Abbey of Tironneau, near Balon, in Maine. The descent from Payn de Montdobleau, Seigneur de Balon, 1088, 1098 (Ord. Vital., l. viii, c. 5, 24; l. x, c. 7), to the Payn de Montdobleau, or Chaurces, of 1155 and 1166 (Lib. Nig., p. 170-1), whether it were in the male or female line, is quite unknown. As to Montdobleau, in the Vendômois; it is supposed to have taken its name from Hugh called Dublellus (yr. son of Bodo, or Odo, Count of Vendôme j. ux. in 1017). Menage produces the following charter:—Hugo, filius Odonis Dublelli, honorem Montis Dublelli a comite Gaufrido, cognomine Martello [Count of Vendôme 1030-1060, and half-br. to the above Bodo's wife] acceptit in curia baronum, militum et legalium virorum, rogatu Hugonis patris, ejusdem honoris domini. Margaret, hss. of Montdobleau, m., long before 1166, Hugh IV, Vicomte de Châteaudun. Patry de Chourches, Seigneur de Malicorne, Balon and St. Agnan, is said to have m. Godonne, dau. of Guy V, Seigneur de Laval in Maine, by Emma [perhaps illeg.] dau. of Geoffrey Plantagenet, Count of Anjou. From him descended the Seigneurs de Malicorne, extinct after 1569. To the arms of the French family, Barry Arg. and Gu., the English branch added as a brisure an orle of martlets, Sa. or Vert.

⁵ He, at the age of 25, succ. his br. Payn, who d. s.p. in 1278.

⁶ Froissart, lib. i, c. 10, 11. It is more probable, however, that he was not taken prisoner till "le lundî en la veille saint Simond et Jude" [i.e., 27 Oct.] (French Chron. of London, p. 55), and executed a few days afterwards.

⁷ Eldest sister and coh. of Richard fitz John, who d. s.p. in 1297.

⁸ Half-sister and hss. of Richard II, Vicomte de Beaumont, who d. before 1249.

⁹ See Genealogist, N.S., vol. iv, p. 195.

¹⁰ Those genealogists who make him son of "Louis, second son of Charles of Anjou, King of Sicily and Jerusalem, yr. brother of St. Louis," omit to give any details of the former Louis. This will be understood when it is mentioned that he was the eldest of Charles' four sons, that he died in Cyprus in 1248, a few days after his birth, being bur. in the Church of the Dominicans at Nicosia. It is the hypothesis that Henry was son of Louis de Brienne-Beaumont that makes him, as Mr. Beltz observes, cousin germain to Eleanor of Castile (a relationship which is otherwise known to have existed), they being both descended from Alphonso IX, King of Leon and Galicia. (See above and Tab. XIII.) It may be observed that the note on this subject in the "Complete Peerage," vol. i, p. 284, should be amended—to bring it into accordance both with Beltz (p. 345) and with the facts—by substituting (lines 4 and 6) "second hypothesis" for "first hypothesis." The arms of the English Beaumonts were identical with those of the French Brienne-Beaumonts.

¹¹ Hss. of her uncle John Comyn, Earl of Buchan, who d. before 3 Dec. 1308.

¹² Some say, in Leicester Castle.

¹³ Froissart, lib. i, c. 301; the Duke certainly returned to England about Michaelmas 1371; the date 1372 (Leland) given for the marriage is therefore incorrect.

¹⁴ Ramsay, Lancaster and York, vol. i, p. 1, proves this date.

Notices of Books.

FEUDAL ENGLAND. By J. H. ROUND. London (Swan Sonnenschien & Co.), 8vo.

Mr. Round has followed up his work on Geoffrey de Mandeville by another and still more important book which deals, in an original and independent spirit, with questions of the greatest interest to the student both of history and genealogy. It is divided into two parts (1) Territorial Studies, (2) Historical Studies, and though some of the essays have already appeared in various magazines, they contain in their present form much additional matter, and demand the careful attention of scholars. Under Territorial Studies the author deals with Domesday Book and the many difficult questions connected therewith, such as the difference between "thegmland" and "sokeland," the exact meaning of the hide, the virgate and the caruca, and the intricacies of land assessment. In order to prove his theories he has carefully collated Domesday with the Inquisitio Comitatus Cantabrigiensis, where he tells us "The true key to the Domesday Survey and to the system of land assessment it records, is found." Among the conclusions which he has formed are, that assessment was based on the five-hide unit, and that "assessment bore no ratio to area or to value in a Vill, and still less in a Manor." "The aim," he tells us, "of the assessors was clearly to arrange the assessment in sums of five hides, ten hides, &c." The argument is carried even further, and the suggestion made that it may have been "the Hundred itself that was assessed for geld, and which was held responsible for its payment." Another conclusion is that "the part which was played in the hidated district of England by the five-hide unit is played in the Danish districts by a unit of six carucates," thus Domesday reveals, as we are told in the preface, "the existence of two separate systems in England, co-extensive with two nationalities." Mr. Round, too, gives his reasons for believing that the second volume of Domesday is earlier in date than the first. The chapters which relate to the early surveys which the author has collated with Domesday, one of which, that of Leicestershire, he claims to have himself discovered, will be found to contain matter deeply interesting to the genealogist, for Mr. Round has incidentally been able to add considerably to our knowledge of early genealogy, and, on the other hand, his strong grasp of the history of our great houses has been of considerable service in enabling him to fix the date of some of these surveys. The renowned Hereward is shown to have been "a man" of the Abbot of Peterborough, and to have held lands at Witham-on-the-Hill and Barholme-with-Stow in Lincolnshire, and the manner in which the false story of the descent of the Wakes from Hereward came to be invented is clearly traced. Proof is given that Stapleton was in error in styling William Meschin "Earl of Cambridge," and that this title was attributed in reality to William de Roumare, uterine brother of William Meschin's nephew, Randulf "de Gernon," Earl of Chester. Not less interesting are the author's remarks upon the origin of the surname of Marmion, and the connection of that family with Robert le Despenser. The settlement of the Oliphants in Scotland is traced to their tenure of Lilford in Northamptonshire, which formed part of the English estates of the Scottish sovereign. Mr. Round's views on the introduction of Knight Service may by some be deemed reactionary, for he has discarded the theory of development from Anglo-Saxon institutions adopted by the more recent writers upon the subject, including Gneist and the late Professor Freeman, in favour of the view that William the Conqueror brought into England the system which had prevailed in Normandy. If merely for the reason that his opinions are entirely original and derived after much patient research in our ancient records with no preconceived idea to support, no one who desires to make a thorough study of this difficult subject can afford to neglect the theories which Mr. Round has here and elsewhere propounded. Upon the question of the assessment of knights fees, after giving many instances of the servitium debitum of holders of fiefs, he points out that this servitium is "almost invariably a multiple of 5, if not of 10," and adds that "the number of differing fiefs assessed at precisely the same figure proves that the assessment was wholly arbitrary." From this he proceeds to his own theory that the service of the tenant in chief "was fixed in relation to, and expressed in terms of, the Constabularia of ten knights, the unit of the feudal host." The author's comments upon scutage are equally subversive of the views of other writers, but are based upon the sure ground of the evidence afforded by the Pipe Rolls themselves.

The second portion of the work consists of various historical essays, all of them of much interest, but those which especially deserve the attention of our readers are, of course, the chapters which deal with genealogical problems. Foremost among these is the article upon Walter Tirel and his wife, which proves that the latter was "daughter, not of a Giffard" (as Mr. Freeman thought), "but of Richard de Clare, by his wife Rohese, daughter of Walter Giffard the elder." We are glad also of the correction for the statement in Dugdale's Baronage that Eudo Dapifer's wife, Rohese, was daughter of Walter Giffard, Earl of Buckingham, Mr. Round showing clearly that she was another daughter of Richard de Clare, by Rohese his wife, daughter of Walter Giffard, and sister therefore to Adeliza, wife of Walter Tirel. The argument is illustrated by a carefully drawn out and much needed pedigree of the powerful house of Clare. Not the least important chapter which the volume contains is the short one which relates to the origin in the male line of the historic race of Neville. We have long been dissatisfied with the version usually accepted, and gladly welcome the indication here given of the true line of descent of Robert fitz Meldred of Raby, whose marriage with the heiress of the first house of Neville caused the adoption of that surname by his descendants, even though we must be content to wait until the identity of Robert's great-grandfather, Uchtred, has been established. Those of our readers who have already enjoyed the author's very able paper on "Our English Hapsburgs," which appeared in the columns of this magazine (N.S., x, 193), will gladly embrace the opportunity now afforded them of reading "The Montmorency Imposture," another exposure of a concocted pedigree which Mr. Round has rightly characterised as "a genealogical nightmare."

A HANDBOOK TO THE ANCIENT COURTS OF PROBATE AND DEPOSITORIES OF WILLS. By GEORGE W. MARSHALL, LL.D., Of the Middle Temple, Barrister-at-Law, and Rouge Croix Pursuivant of Arms. London (Horace Cox), 8vo.

With the appearance of this little handbook we are brought face to face with the fact that Dr. Marshall has once again undertaken to act as a guide and comforter. This time he conducts the uninitiated to the mysterious realms where are deposited the testamentary evidences the genealogist loves. At a glance the enquiring student can discover the most likely door which may conceal the will of a long sought ancestor, if only he, the ancestor, was thoughtful enough to make one, and that in England or Wales. Here we are inclined to suggest an addition to the title, which at present requires a geographical limit. We note that the Channel Islands are not included in the work although the Ecclesiastical jurisdiction of the same was annexed to the See of Winchester in Elizabeth's reign. The size of the present handbook is more appropriate to its calling than its more imposing predecessor, issued in 1889. The number of that edition being confined to fifty copies only, prevented a large number of genealogists and lawyers from possessing a most useful, if not a necessary, book of reference.

THE GENTLEMAN'S MAGAZINE LIBRARY.—ENGLISH TOPOGRAPHY. Parts V and VI. London (Elliot Stock). 8vo.

The flood of literature which swells the book market day by day creates the serious difficulty to the collector of finding space for his treasures, and for this reason, no doubt, the Gentleman's Magazine with its hundreds of volumes is now rarely to be found in private libraries. The series, of which we have Parts V and VI before us, was started some few years ago, and is a classification of the topographical, genealogical and antiquarian contributions contained in that most useful publication from its commencement in 1731 to 1868, alphabetically arranged under Counties. These two volumes include Hampshire, Herefordshire, Herts, Huntingdonshire, Kent and Lancashire, of which Kent and Hampshire received most attention at the hands of antiquaries in past times. The value of the information here gathered together lies in the fact, as Mr. Gomme points out in his preface, that it was collected by people personally acquainted with the localities dealt with, and much of it is invaluable to genealogists, such as inscriptions in churches and churchyards, most of which are now obliterated by the hand of time. Those copied at Cheshunt in 1790, "by a Traveller while his dinner was dressing," have probably long since shared that fate. The still unexplained inscription at Christ Church, a curious one at Hackington, and many at Westerham, Swanscombe, Tedstone Delamere, Alresford, Bishop's Sutton, Bramshot and other places are recorded in these volumes. Accounts of restorations of churches show the vandal at work in the past as in our time, and this, although interesting, is somewhat painful reading. The indexes, as in previous volumes, are excellent.

THE HERTS GENEALOGIST AND ANTIQUARY. Vol. II, No. 9. Edited by WILLIAM BRIGG.

The July number of this publication is of special interest on account of the fresh light which is thrown upon the parentage of Amphyllis Washington, by recent discoveries made by the Editor, Mr. William Brigg, in the parish registers of Tring. It will be remembered that Mr. H. F. Waters, in his well-known pamphlet upon the Washington pedigree, was inclined, though very tentatively, to think that the maiden name of Amphyllis had been Roades. We believe that Mr. Waters, whose researches at Tring were mainly confined to the name of Washington, subsequently saw reason to alter his opinion on the point, and though the discoveries now made fall short of absolute proof of what the surname of Amphyllis actually was, they supply a clue, which will, we trust, be speedily followed up.

Notes and Queries.

ENGLISH EPITAPHS ABROAD.—Genealogists may be glad, in case they do not know of it, to have their attention drawn to "a journey through part of the Low Countries, Germany, Italy and France," in 1663, published in a Collection of Voyages and Travels (1732), vol. vi. The travellers made careful copies of several epitaphs which they came across. For instance, at Frankendal, in "the Low Dutch Church," were "these three inscriptions (two in escutcheon, and one on a little marble monument) to Englishmen"—

- (1). Mr. Stafford Willmot, Chevalier, Gentilhomme de la Chambre privée de sa Majesté de la Grande Bretagne, lequel deceda le 1 jour d'Alvris (sic) anno 1620.
- (2). Monsieur George Herbert aagé de 30 ans, Escuir Anglois, mourust en Franquenthal le 8 Janvier 1621, estant Lieutenant de son Cousin Gerrard Herbert Chevalier Gentilhomme de la Chambre privée de sa Majesté de la Grande Bretagne.

And one other. The former inscription refers, I think, to a member of Lord Rochester's family. Among the names of exiled English Catholics are inscriptions to Thomas Pitz (co. Oxon), Henry Anstey (co. Oxon), Thomas Southwell and Mary Roper. There are also lists of the English at Venice in 1663 and 1665.

J. H. ROUND.

PEEBLES OF DEWSBURY.—On page 76, vol. ix, appears a pedigree of this family, in which Andrew Peebles, D.D. is said by Dugdale to have died in 1632. In the Parish Registers of Wintringham, co. York, the entry of Andrew Peebles to that Vicarage is dated 10 July 1625, and his burial is recorded on 14th Sept. 1631.

SCUTUM.

FARAMUS OF BOULOGNE.

The subject of this paper may serve to illustrate the close relations between England and the Boulonnais for a century after the Norman Conquest. Even at a time of peculiar darkness, the career of Faramus can be traced in our chronicles and our public records, and his connection with England covers a space of more than forty years.

His first appearance is in 1130, when as "Faramus filius Willelmi de Bolonia," he is entered on the Pipe Roll of that year as owing £20 to the Crown, "pro placitis terre sue, et ut habeat terram suam quam noverca sua tenet" (p. 50). This entry is found under Surrey, and we seek to know how he came to be connected with that county. The first step towards solving this problem is found in a charter to Bee, among those of Okeburne Priory, in which Faramus confirms the gift of a hide in Blaham, belonging to Clapham :—

Omnibus fidelibus ecclesiæ, tam presentibus quam futuris, Faramus filius Willelmi de Bolonia . . . ego recognosco et ex parte meâ concedo donationem quam antecessores mei, scilicet Gaufridus filius comitis Eustacii de Bolonia, avus meus, et Willelmus de Bolonia, filius ipsius, pater meus, fecerunt ecclesiæ Sanctæ Mariæ Becci, scilicet unam hidam in Belghehem, quæ pertinebat ad manerium de Clopham . . .

Hujus concessionis meæ fuerunt concessores et testes fratres mei Eustacius et Simon¹

This charter was confirmed by his daughter and sole heiress in her widowhood (i.e. after 1189) :—

Sybilla de Tyngria filia Farami de Bolonia, domina de Clopham . . . Noverit universitas vestra me . . . confirmasse . . . donationem quam antecessores mei, fecerunt . . . de una hida terre . . . in Balgeham quæ pertinebat ad manerium de Clopham.²

Among the witnesses to this charter were Walter and Pentecost of Wandsworth, Robert of Wimbledon, Robert the parson of Streatham, and Andrew of Croydon, clerk, who drew the document.

On referring to Domesday we find that Clapham was held by Geoffrey de Mandeville.³ But he also held two other Surrey manors, Carshalton (Aultone) and Wanborough (Weneberge). Of the former manor we read :—

Tenet Wesman VI hidas de Goisfrido filio comitis Eustachii. Hanc terram dedit ei Goisfridus de Mannevil cum filia sua.

Here we recognise that Geoffrey, described by Faramus as his grandfather, entered in 1086 as the son in law of Geoffrey de Mandeville. Did he then in that capacity acquire by subinfeudation the manor of Clapham as well? To answer this question we must trace the subsequent fate of these three manors. Clapham is well ascertained to have passed from Faramus to his daughter. As to Carshalton, its church was given by Faramus to Merton Priory; the manor was confirmed, with Clapham, to his daughter by Richard I;⁴ and his heir, Ingelram de Fiennes is found holding it, in the Testa, of the Honour of Mandeville.

³ D.B., 36.

⁴ Cart. Ant., A. 36.

Lastly, as to Wanborough, we have the charter of Geoffrey de Mandeville, Earl of Essex (I date it 1154-8), notifying that :—

Faramus de Bolonia vendidit abbati Gisleberto et monachis de Waverleia terram de Warenberga, quæ ad feodum meum spectat, pro centum marcis argenti,— and that, at the prayer of Henry (II), he had confirmed the transaction. I hold then that Faramus held these three Surrey manors from the house of Mandeville by subinfeudation, through his grandmother, a daughter of Geoffrey de Mandeville the first.

It will have been observed that Faramus styles his grandfather Geoffrey, a son of Count Eustace of Boulogne. And so does Domesday. This might be, and has been, taken to mean a legitimate son; but my friend, M. V. J. Vaillant,¹ who is well acquainted with the history of the early Counts of Boulogne, assures me that the sons of Eustace are known, and that Geoffrey is not among them. We must, therefore, assume him to have been a natural son. A parallel is afforded by Jocelin “of Lovaine,” the ancestor of the Percys, who, though styled “brother” of Queen Adeliza, and exalted by the peerage writers as a legitimate son of Duke Godfrey, was probably not so.² Such cases as those of Brian, “filius Comitis,” and the two Roberts, “sons” of Henry I and “brothers” of the Empress Maud, are indeed common enough.

I may here insert an unpublished English charter of Faramus. The Sutton, to which two of the witnesses belonged, was clearly the Sutton adjoining Carshalton, for one of these witnesses, as “Vitalis de Sutt[one]” witnessed a grant of Nigel de Mowbray at Banstead, close to this Sutton, “circ. 1150;”³ but I cannot determine the locality of the grant. The name of one of the English peasants, Wulfric Gatherweed, should be noticed.

Faramus de Bolonia omnibus hominibus suis tam francis quam anglicis salutem. Notum sit et presentibus et futuris quod ego Faramus do et concedo Thome Pinget servienti meo pro servicio suo totam terram quam Wluard filius Brictrig tenuit in Sud. (sic) et in Nort (sic) et hagam illam quam Hugo Banec tenuit et terram quam Wluric Gadrewede tenuit pro v acris et desuper decem acras in Spertmera et masuram quam Haewis Lute tenuit tenendum de me et heredibus meis ille et heredes sui in feodo et hereditate bene et in pace libere et quiete reddendo annuatim pro omni servicio ii solidos.

Hujus donationis sunt testes Gillebertus de Colevile, Viel de Suttune. Hamo de Suttune, Gillebertus de Hames,⁴ Turbertus, Willelmus filius Reinaldi, Robertus filius Widonis, Simon filius Viel, Thomas filius Farami. Alanus presbiter, Hugo, Merlin, Hugo de Curteuile, Willelmus de Loges, Simon de Abrincis, Stefamus camerarius, Bernardus clericus, Philippus de Enela.⁵

Now that we have traced the descent and the inheritance of Faramus, we may turn to his doings. In 1141, writes John of Hexham, “rexit familiam regis Stephani Willelmus d’Ippe, homo Flandrensis et Pharamus nepos reginæ⁶ Matildis, et iste Bononiensis⁷” He attended Stephen’s re-coronation, on his release, at Canterbury, at the close of this year.¹ On this, as on other occasions, he appears simply as "Faramus," that name being distinctive enough.² It was somewhere, probably, about this time that he became a benefactor to the Templars, and the bull of Pope Eugene in 1147 shews that his benefaction to Waverley was previous to that date.

His prominence under Stephen is specially attested by the treaty between the King and the Duke in 1153. We there read of William, the King's son :—

Dedit ei dux et concessit . . . servitium Faramusi preter castra et villas de Doure et quod ad honorem Doure pertinet.³

Slight though it is, this reference is obviously most important. It suggests that Faramus was holding, at the time, Dover Castle and the honour of (Peverell of) Dover. Walchelin Maminot, who had held the castle against Stephen and his Queen in 1138, must have been replaced, if so, by Faramus, on Kent being all subdued to the King. Duke Henry would desire, of course, to recover control of the famous castle when he succeeded to the crown. There are two circumstances which point, at least, in the same direction. The historians of Dover and the Cinque Ports have always asserted that the Constablership of Dover Castle was hereditary in the family of Fiennes. Now this seems to be sheer fiction for a century and more after the Conquest, nor do I know of any trustworthy list of the Constables of the castle. But the existence of Fiennes' (or the Constable's) tower among those of the fortress reminds us there was a connection, though it may have been only of a late date, in which case the fact that Fiennes was heir of Faramus would be merely a coincidence. The other is the connection of Faramus, and of Fiennes as his heir, with Wendover. Lipscomb quotes, under Wendover, from a suit recorded in the Placitorum Abbreviatio, the evidence of which proves that Crown demesne in Wendover, etc., was alienated by Stephen to Hugh de Gournay, and resumed by Henry II, after the expedition to Toulouse, when the bulk of it was granted to Faramus. Testing this evidence by the Pipe Rolls, we read in that of 2 Hen. II, "In Wendoura et in Hohton et in Eiton c li. bl.," and another entry helps us to identify this with the land granted to Hugh. But by Mich. 1158 Faramus was already in possession of Wendover; for we read in the Roll of 4 Hen. II, "Et Farumuso LX li. in Wendoura et in Eiton numero." Lipscombe, giving unfortunately no authority for his statement, suggests that Hugh may have received this estate from Stephen in compensation for losing Dover and the custody of the Cinque Ports. If so, Faramus might have done the same. But it would be rash to pursue conjectures so hazardous. The fact which is certain is that Henry II did grant Faramus 60 librates of land in Wendover and Eton, and that they are duly entered among the "Terræ datæ" of Bucks from Mich. 1158 onwards. The charter by which he did this was given at Woodstock and witnessed by Thomas the Chancellor, Henry of Essex,

² As "Feramus," he witnessed a charter of "Mathildis Dei gratia Anglorum Regina et Bolonie Comitissa" to the Abbey of Clairmarais shortly afterwards (1142).

the Constable, and Richard de Luci.¹ It was previous to the King's departure from England in Aug 1158. In the meanwhile, Faramus had figured on the Pipe Roll of 1156, where we read, under Cambridgeshire, "et in wasto de Saham per destructionem Faramusi." He had also (May 1157) been present with Henry at Colchester, where he attested simply as "Faramus," when the King granted a charter to Stephen's Abbey of Faversham, "prece et petitione Willelmi comitis Warrene [i.e., the Count of Boulogne] cognati mei."²

Faramus, as a kinsman of the house of Boulogne, was connected with Count William, whose charter confirming the grant of Tring to Faversham he witnessed. He was also a witness to the Count's confirmation of grants to the Abbey of Beaulieu in the Boulonnais, and to his charter granted at Tinchebrai, in 1158, to the Abbaye des Blanches near Mortain.³ The Count duly recognised the relationship in the following charter, granting him Martock (Somerset) in fee:—

Willelmus] comes Bolonie omnibus baronibus, ministris, et fidelibus suis de honore qui fuit comitis Eustachii avi sui (sic) in Anglia sive extra Angliam salutem. Sciatis me dedisse Faramuso cognato meo Martoch manerium meum in feodo et hereditate . . . ad tenendum de me et heredibus meis . . . per servicium unius militis. T[estibus] Isabella uxore mea, Pagano de Bully, Alulfo, Manasse cantore, Arnulfo de Caiou, Bartholomeo, Ingelramo de Botin.⁴

Martock continued in the hands of his heirs, though in the Testa de Nevill and in the Somerset Record Society's edition of Kirby's Quest, the name Fiernis is wrongly given as "Frennis," which obscures the identity.

We also find Faramus attesting an interesting charter of Count William in favour of Furness Abbey:—

Willelmus comes Bolonie Moret' et Warren' vicecomitibus et ministris suis de Wif[is]and salutem. Sciatis me donasse Abbati Furnesii et ecclesie sue omnem quietudinem telonei et consuetudinis de Wisant. Quare volo et firmiter precipio quod et ipse et omnes fratres Domus sue, sine ulla vexatione aut telonei exactione, quieti et liberi dimittantur quotiens ad capitulum Cisterciense ierint vel ad me venerint pro negotiis suis vel meis. Testibus: Reginaldo de War[enna]; Faramo⁵; Hug[one] Placet (sic); Eustachio Cancellario.

(Coucher book of Furness [Chetham Society] I, p. 180.)

A very curious story of the part taken by Faramus on the death of this Count William (1159) is only found, so far as I know, in an unpublished MS. of John's reign. I here transcribe the passage quantum valeat. Mary, the nun of Romsey Abbey, had been left, by her brother's death, sole heiress of Boulogne:—

Faramus ergo de Bolonia multum familiaris regis Henrici secundi, facta ei multa persuasione, eo quod predicta Maria eius fuit consanguinea, impetravit ab eodem rege litteras ad Alexandrum papam dirigi ut predicta Maria a professione monachali

¹ Cart. Ant. A., 35, but the text is corrupt. The confirmation by Henry III, in the same Collection, gives a better one.

² Eyton's Itinerary, p. 27 (where Faramus is not identified).

³ Archives at Mortain.

⁴ Cart. Ant. A., 34. But here again the confirmation by Henry III gives a better text. In the return temp. John (Testa, pp. 274, 275) the manor occurs as 'Marcoge' or 'Marcog,' held of the Honour of Boulogne by the heirs of Faramus, and valued at £40 a year. "Ingelram de Botin" probably derived his name from Beutin on the Canche, below Montreuil. The family were benefactors to Missenden Abbey.

⁵ Mr. Atkinson, the editor, seems to have had some misgivings on so strange a name.

absoluta traderetur Matheo fratri comitis Flandrie quasi pro pace inter Flandrenses et Bolonienses reformanda, inter quos mortalis guerra oriebatur. Quod ita factum est. Matheus igitur duxit predictam Mariam licet multum renuentem. Et factus comes Bolonie, etc., etc.

Although known in England as Faramus "de Bolonia," in the Boulonnais itself he was Faramus "de Tingria," a name he derived from his fief of Tingry in the comté of Boulogne. Sibyl, his daughter and heiress, was known as Sibyl de Tingry, as lady of this fief.¹

But we have not exhausted his English estates. In the Testa de Nevill surveys of the Honour of Boulogne, we read :—

Pharamus de Bonon [modo] Willelmus de Fenés VI milites in Lamburne in Essex, Fífide et la Blakehull', Lagefar' et unum membrum quod Radulfus de Marcy tenet et quedam pars in Wyh'm quam Templarii tenent et quedam pars in Herlaue quam Gilbertus tenet, omnes iste particule ij milites ; in Alfladewyk et Hichinton in Hertford et in Cotes in Cant' et quoddam socagium in villa de Cant' omnes iste iij particule ij milites.²

Sibilla de Fenés tenet VI milites scilicet in Lamburne II milites ; in Fífhide et Blakehall et Lacfare et j membro quod Radulfus de Marcy tenuit et unam partem quam Gilbertus tenuit et unam partem in Wykham quam Ricardus Flandrensis tenuit—quam Templarii modo tenent—ij milites ; et in Herdfordsire in Hakbladewyke, Hihhinton, et in com. Canteb' in Cotes, et in socagio in Cant. ij milites.³

This must represent a late enfeoffment, for the lands appear in Domesday as held by several different tenants. In Essex Faramus had succeeded a Richard and one or two other Domesday tenants ; in Herts his predecessor was Rumold ; and in Cambridgeshire it is most interesting to note that, though Cotes is unmentioned in Domesday, its tenant is duly found as a juror for the Hundred of Wetherley, once as "Rumold de Cotis," and once as "Rumold homo comitis Eustachii."⁴ In Cambridgeshire also, therefore, it was he who preceded Faramus. But vide infra. It would seem that, in the Boulonnais as well, his fief did not come to him by descent.

There is little more to be said of Faramus save that, in 1171, he gave the tithes of Sombres to the Abbey of St. Josse describing himself on that occasion as "Timens pro peccatis meis."⁵ By Matildis, his wife, he had a son, William Faramusi,⁶ who left no issue, and a daughter, Sibyl, who carried his fief to another baron of the Boulonnais, Enguerrand (Ingelramus), sire de Fiennes, slain at Acre in 1189. To her Richard I confirmed Carshalton, Clapham, etc.,⁷ while to her son and heir, William, the Martock and Wendover estates of his grandfather Faramus were similarly confirmed by the Crown.¹

⁶ The bishop of Thérouanne ("Morinorum") confirms this gift as made "pro salute anime sue et Willelmi filii sui" and for celebrating the anniversary "Willelmi filii sui" (Cartulary of St. Josse, fo. 5). In the same Cartulary (fo. 20) is a charter of Count Mathew, in 1172 to which the first witness is "Pharamo de Tingri."

The English house of Fiennes, descended from that union, was not forgetful of its remote ancestor, as we are reminded by the name of the "Rev. Pharamus Fiennes"—one may make a present of the name to a novelist—living in the reign of Charles II.² But the name of Faramus of Boulogne was perpetuated in other ways; for while at Tingry there is found a family of "Féramus,"³ there was also on his Somersetshire fief a family of "de Boulogne," holding from his heirs, the house of Fiennes, and perhaps originally enfeoffed by him, if not descended from one of his brothers. For we find, in our records, the name of Faramus preserved among them also.

J. H. ROUND.

Since this article was in type, Mr. H. J. Ellis, of the MS. department, British Museum, has kindly called my attention to two original charters relating to Faramus and his father. They deal with land in "Alfladewick" (Alswick in Layston, Herts) which we found mentioned among the fees of Faramus in the Testa list. From them we learn, in my opinion, that he and his father before him held the fees of the Domesday Rumold, not as his successor, but as mesne lord. I infer, therefore, that the Count of Boulogne must have given William "de Bolonia" (or his father) the "servitium" of Rumold's fief, as King Stephen jure uxoris gave that of Adam de Sumeri to Geoffrey de Mandeville.⁴ or as the Count of Boulogne may have given Arnulf of Ardres (or his heir) the "servitium" of that Essex fief, which the Merchs had held direct in 1086 (D.B.), but only held as tenants of Arnulf's heir in the Testa survey of the Honour.⁵

³ Ex inform. M. V. J. Vaillant of Boulogne.

⁴ See my Geoffrey de Mandeville, p. 143.

⁵ See my Feudal England, pp. 463-4.

The earlier of these two charters is granted by William "de Bolonia," and bears what is probably his seal. It cannot be later, or much earlier, than 1130. From its witnesses I select these as bearing on the subject of this paper:—"Testibus istis Salomone presbitero¹; Hugone de Bosevilla²; Hugone de Merch³; . . . Simone de Suttuna⁴; Wulfward de Autona."⁵ The second charter records a "conventio inter Faramum filium Willelmi de Bolonia et Hugonem filium Ulgeri" (a London magnate), and is a little later in date. It mentions that "Hugo pro feudo illo homagium Faramo apud Wanebergam fecit," Wanborough, it will be remembered, being held by Faramus from his cousin Geoffrey de Mandeville. The list of witnesses is specially interesting from its evidence that Faramus was already in possession of his fief of Tingry.

"Testantibus istis: Hugo de Waneberga, et Willelmus de Bosevilla, et Hugo de Chastreche,⁶ et Symon de Hesdingnuil,⁷ et Baldwinus Richetala, et Herbertus de Waneberga, et Baldewinus de Livenbruna,⁸ et Radulfus de Hesdingnuil, et Baldewinus de Chastreche, et Brizo de Tingri, et Raginaldus de Hesdingnuil, et Rogerus clericus Lund[oniæ], et Willelmus filius Ulgeri, et multis aliis."⁹

It will be seen that no fewer than seven of these witnesses came from Tingry or its neighbourhood.

Lastly, I come to a charter granted to Missenden Abbey after Faramus had acquired his estate at Wendover from Henry II. Here again he deems it needless to employ any surname.

¹⁰ Sciant omnes tam presentes quam futuri quod ego Pharamus dedi et concessi in perpetuum elemosinam deo et ecclesie sancte Marie de Messend' et canonicis ibidem deo servientibus pro salute domini mei regis Henrici et regine et puerorum suorum et pro salute mea et uxoris mee et puerorum nostrorum et antecessorum et successorum nostrorum totam terram de Piterleia¹¹ sicut predicti canonici fossis suis et sepibus eam circumdederunt et sicut inde per me saisiati sunt, que semper antea vasta jacuerat et inculata et absque omni redditu, et preterea iiii acras ante domum Durwini filii Quintini et Elwini Venatoris, etc., etc. . . .

It may, in conclusion, fairly be said that owing to our wealth in early records, too little explored even now, the evidence collected in this paper is an addition not merely to our own knowledge but to that which is available to the antiquaries of France.

THE ORIGIN OF THE LINDSAYS.

I ought to say something (though it is little) with reference to Sir George Sitwell's article in the July number of the Genealogist. I am much gratified that so distinguished an antiquary should have given his attention to the subject of the origin of my family, and, although I cannot think he has proved that origin, I thank him heartily for his suggestions.

Sir George Sitwell has not, indeed, attempted to prove the paternity of Walter de Lindsay. What he has done is to emphasize a fact that I had myself mentioned, viz., that a gentleman living in Lindsey as a knight of Hugh Lupus, Earl of Chester, had the name de Lindissi attributed to him, the possibility of which the late Earl of Crawford went far to deny.

Whether Baldric, to whom the name de Lindissi is attributed in a Confirmation Charter of Earl Ranulf to the Abbey of S. Evreux, c. 1121, was identical with Baldric, Lord of the Manor of Coole in Cheshire under Hugh Lupus, I will not attempt to decide. The identity would be exceedingly probable if Coole (now Kelsall) could be shewn to have been inherited by a Richard son of Baldric, but Mr. Round's suggestion that the Lindsey benefactor was called de Lindissi to distinguish him from another Baldric cannot be disregarded.

It is perhaps an error to suppose that territorial surnames were originally adopted as a mark of prestige. I am inclined to think that they began in mere convenience, and that for some time after the Norman Settlement the prénom or Christian name was principally cared for. It is obvious that the Knights of Counties must have been often classed under the names of their Counties. The expression Knights of Lindsey comes down to the reigns of the Edwards.

Now Walter de Lindissi is on record as bearing that surname in 1113-16, at least five years before the surname is recorded for Baldric. If he was son of Baldric, and if Baldric was Lord of Boquencé, and if Walter thus belonged to a distinguished house in which the name of Baldric had been pre-eminent since early in the tenth century, it is very astonishing that no Baldric de Lindesay should ever have appeared as son of the Scottish house. Walter was succeeded by William, William by Walter, and these names were those of the eldest line till 1281. No younger son named Baldric has ever been discovered. Randolph, Simon, David, John, Gerard, these names I know, but I have not found a Baldric nor a Richard in Scotland. It will be recollected that Lord Crawford, who devoted particular attention to this Baldric (Lives of the Lindsays, vol. i, p. 18), nevertheless believed the origin of the name to be Limesi. I think, on the contrary, that Lindsey in Lincolnshire is the more probable derivation, and that Walter acquired the surname in the same way as Baldric acquired it, while the Scottish family adhered to the surname with greater tenacity than did the descendants and heirs of Baldric.

I should a priori expect Walter de Lindissi to be son of a William. Now there was a person named William who was a much more important owner of lands under Hugh Lupus than Baldric was.

It is, of course, difficult to prove that the person named William was not either William (Malbane) Malbedeng, William fitz Nigel, nor William Perci, but in fact William, not designed as one of these, held manors or parts of manors under Hugh Lupus in Cheshire, Lindsey, Berks. Dorset, Bucks and Oxon, holding his principal estate (in ten manors) in Dorset. I cannot claim him as my ancestor because I cannot prove that Walter inherited any of these lands, but in most of these counties there were Lindsays. There is indeed only one fact which I can prove. Fortintone and Ulseby were both in demesne of Hugh Lupus, 1086 and in 1116. They are in Lindsey and both belonged to the Scottish family before 1185. Therefore the Scottish Lindsay and therefore, most probably, the first of them was enfeoffed in Fortintone by an Earl of Chester, but the surname is of older date. The connection of the Lindsays with the Earls of Chester is more pronounced after the succession of de Meschines, while it becomes closer still after the Chester-Huntingdon marriage. Let me add that there is no vassal of Hugh Lupus, who is recorded as the tenant of his fees outside Chester, to be compared with "William." It is indeed remarkable how very few of the Knights of Hugh Lupus are expressly mentioned as his vassals outside the County Palatine. William Malbedeng was by far the largest proprietor inside Cheshire, and a William the largest recorded proprietor out of it. They may therefore be identical—if so, the fact can probably be proved. •

My answer to Sir George Sitwell then is that while I should be pleased to accept Sir Baldric de Bocquencé as my ancestor, I see no proof, nor even presumption, of the fact. That the first ancestor of my race in Scotland was a man of some distinction is obvious. He is recorded as "Noble and Knight" in 1113-16. He and his descendants were at once Magnates Scotiæ. They never cared for any but their English surname, to which they clung tenaciously. They were closely allied with the Earls of Chester for two centuries after Walter appeared in Scotland. They were constantly in England, and they held all the most important offices of State in Scotland. More "this deponent knoweth not," though continually in search of the truth.

C. 3. He was bur. in the Church of St. George at Nancy.

D. 1. [He m. 2, at the Church of St. Nicolas near Angers, 10 Sep. 1454, Jane (b. 10 Nov. 1433), dau. of Guy XIV, Count of Laval in Maine; she d. at the Castle of Beaufort in Anjou 149³/₅, bur. there in the Church of the Franciscans.]

² In the Hist. of Bertrand de Guesclin, ch. 14, it is said "qu'estant environné et assailly de chevaliers Bretons et Anglois, de hache et de glaive, fu sa baniere gettée à terre, et luy prins par le bacinet. Et adonc un Anglois, faux tyrant et cruel, le ferit traitement de une dague parmy la bouche, tant que d'autre part luy fist passer demy pié. Et quant ledit Charles sentit le cop, si s'estendy à terre, baty sa coulpe, et se commanda à Dieu, en disant: Vraiz Dieu, pardonnez moy la mort des bonnes gens qui cy meurent pour moy. J'ai guerrié long temps outre ma volonté, et par l'ennortement de ma femme, qui tousjours m'a donné à entendre que j'avoie tres bon droit." But Georges de Lesnen, his physician, who was at the battle, says that he was taken prisoner, and slaughtered some time afterwards.

⁴ Niece and hss. of John III, Duke of Brittany.

⁵ Authors agree that he ought rather to be called the Criminal—Criminosus, non Cærimoniosus.

⁶ The Emperor Charles IV erected in 1354 the Seigneurie of Pont-à-Mousson into a Marquisate; and, early in Feb. 1355, King John of France raised the Comté of Bar to a Dukedom.

¹¹ DuChesne, M. de Chastillon, preuves, p. 101-103.

¹² She is said to have m. 1, as first wife, Henry, or rather John-Henry, Count of Goritz (d. 1338); but this seems impossible.

¹⁸ Butkens, tom. i, p. 622. Anselme (tom. ii, p. 331) calls her dau. of Louis, Count of Chiny. But different writers vary materially in their accounts of her family.

²⁰ He was in his youth styled Count of Guise. His grand-uncle "Louis par la grace de Dieu Cardinal, Duc de Bar, Marquis du Pont, Seigneur de Cassel," gave him the Duché of Bar, etc. The letters of donation, dated at St. Michel 13 Aug. 1419, are given in full by the Sieur Godefroy in his Genealogy of the Counts and Dukes of Bar. He was recognised as Duke of Lorraine in 1431 by virtue of the testament of Duke Charles his father-in-law, but resigned the Duché to his son John 26 March 1453. He succ. King Louis III. his brother in Nov. 1434.

C. 3. He was summ. to Parl. as a Baron 6 Dec. 1389—30 Nov. 1396; d. at Raby Castle, bur. in the Collegiate Church at Staindrop. [He m. 1, Margaret, dau. of Hugh, Earl of Stafford; she d. 9 June 1396, bur. at Brancepeth.]

C. 4. She was b. at Peaufort Castle in Anjou; legitimated by Act of Parl., 9 Feb. 139 $\frac{6}{7}$; d. at Howden, bur. in Lincoln Cathedral Church. [She m. 1, Robert de Ferrers, Lord of Wem and Oversley; he (b. 1370) d. 1410]

¹ He had a pretended marriage in 1354 with Juana, widow of Diego de Haro, Señor de Orduna, dau. of Pedro Fernandez de Castro.

² Complete Peerage, vol. vi, p. 12. Foster (Royal Descents, ped. of Nevill, p. 11) calls her "Anastasia, dau. and hr. of John FitzRobert, Lord of Warkworth, etc.," at the same time shewing in a note that she could not have been "Eva, dau. and hr. of John, Lord Clavering" [=John FitzRobert aforesaid]!

³ According to Beltz (Garter, p. 139) by his will, dated 25 Nov. 1400, he directs to be bur. by his wife Isabel at Langley. Hunter (S. Yorkshire, vol. i. p. 111) says that both she and her husband were bur. at Fotheringay.

⁴ See Tab. XXII, note 13.

⁵ In her issue coh. of her brother Edmund, Earl of Kent, who d. 15 Sep. 1348.

⁶ He was "aged 26" at his father's death, but was, perhaps, much older. Otherwise he, the eldest of 10 children, would have been b. when his father, "aged 40," in 1331, was at least 50.

⁷ Her will was dated 15 Aug. and proved 4 Sep. 1446. The day of her death is obtained from the Calendar in a Fitzwilliam missal. (Hunter, vol. i, p. 113; ii, p. 54.) The statement of the Heralds, that she m. 3, Richard Wentworth of Bretton, is shewn to be false by Hunter (vol. ii, p. 244).

⁸ In her issue sole hr. of her brother Edmund, Earl of March, who d. 19 Jan. 1425.

⁹ He assumed the name of "Plantagenet" apparently about 1448. This name, so extensively applied by late writers, had not been heard of in English history since the time of Geoffrey of Anjou, as Sir James Ramsay (Lancaster and York) has well remarked.

¹⁰ Eighteenth child of her father, tenth by his second marriage.

William Lee of Cold Ashby, co. Northants., son of Henry Lee, of London, mercer, and of Binfield, co. Berks, by Anne his wife, daughter of Robert Lee of Binfield, was of Cold Ashby by bequest of his father in 1639.¹ The coincidence of this earlier William Lee dying at Cold Ashby is remarkable, but the connection is not apparent, and the will is introduced more to guard against the possible exclusion of what may, in the light of future discoveries, prove to be valuable evidence than with much hope that it would so prove. Letters to the Vicar of the parish requesting permission to examine the Register have not received the courtesy of a reply, and, as my time in the neighbourhood was limited, I was reluctantly obliged to forego an examination which might have set at rest the vexed question of the ancestry of the Mercer of London.

INQUISITIONS POST MORTEM.

The following series of Inquisitions Post Mortem represents a search of the Chancery, Miscellaneous, Exchequer and Court of Wards Calendars in the Public Record Office, from the reign of Edward IV to the period in the seventeenth century, when the taking of these interesting depositions was finally discontinued.

They form a valuable supplement to the wills which have preceded them, supporting and confirming the evidence given in them as well as supplying some new and important facts, noteworthy among which is the second marriage of Joane, the widow of Richard Lee of Quarrendon (who died circ. 1499—1500²), to John Clerk, gent., and which accounts for the connection suspected with the Clerk family.³ It seems probable that Sir John Clerk of Thame, co. Oxon, Knt., whose will, pro. 19 May 1539, has been already given,⁴ was the son of this John Clerk, by a former marriage.

PEDIGREE OF BAYNARD.

An important pedigree of the Baynards, of Ashdon, Essex, in the thirteenth and fourteenth centuries is established by the charters on fos. 186, 186^d of the Lewes Cartulary (Cott. MS. Vesp., F. xv). These charters are successive confirmations of Ashdon church to Lewes Priory. Ashdon was part of the Baynard fief in Domesday; and it would seem that the forfeiture of the tenant in chief, and transference of the fief to the Fitzwalters, did not affect the under-tenants of Baynard blood. In the Fitzwalter carta (1166) we read: "Gilbertus de Essendone 1 militem et dimidium." The pedigree proved by the Lewes charters is as follows:—

It is highly probable that the Gilbert of 1166 was father to the above William. The same carta, it may be added, shews us a Fulc Bainard as a large tenant on the fief.

It is remarkable that Morant, in his Essex, wholly ignored this Bainard descent, and gave the Fitzwalters as lords of the manor, though they were really the over lords.

Notices of Books.

- CRATFIELD PARISH PAPERS. By the late Rev. William Holland, B.A.
 Edited by John James Raven, D.D., F.S.A. London (Jarrold and Sons).

It is seldom that material for a parochial history is forthcoming in the form in which it is here presented, and with such evidence, augmented by the Parish Registers and Manorial Court Rolls (if they exist), the task of writing the history of Cratfield would be comparatively light. Unfortunately it is not an important parish, but this fact need never stand in the way of a local historian. The earliest date of these parochial records is 1490, the commencement of the extant Churchwarden's Accounts—The Guild Accounts and Town Book begin in 1534, and there are Inventories of Church Ornaments and Jewels made in 1528 and 1555. The last mentioned are interesting as showing how the Act of Parliament of 1549 was the cause of many an item in the earlier inventory being non est inventus in the later. This Act was also the opportunity for the "hole townshypp" by consent to sell some of the plate. In the latter inventory it may be noticed that Papist books appear among the items, but it is unlikely that they were the same as used before 1549. The history of the Church bells is traceable by the Accounts and the Editor's notes, which latter are numerous throughout the volume in explanation of the text. In one place our attention is drawn to an early instance of a Puritan's appearance in the pulpit, sub "the skoote that preached hear" (1599). The Editor suggests "Scot" as the modern rendering for "skoote." In 1617 £10 was paid for making the pulpit, and we should have been glad to know if the same exists at the present date, for, if we remember rightly, the interior of Cratfield Church was ruthlessly restored not so many years ago. There are, of course, many uninteresting entries in the Accounts, but the scare of the Spanish Armada, as do other episodes in our history, relieves what would otherwise be monotonous. The Editor has evidently worked hard to make this valuable transcript as interesting as possible, and has, we consider, considerably enhanced the value of the late Mr. Holland's work.

STOKE UNDER HAMDON AND OTHER MANORS IN SOMERSET IN CONNECTION WITH SIR MATTHEW GOURNAY, KT., AND THE DUCHY OF CORNWALL.
By John Batten, F.S.A. Taunton (Barnicott and Pearce, Athenæum Press).

Like all the author's work, this pamphlet, which is intended as supplementary to his "History of the Barony of Beauchamp of Somerset," is very carefully written, and is a valuable contribution to the archaeology of Somerset. Mr. Batten traces the history of the manor of Stoke-under-Hamdon, and shows how it passed into the possession of the famous soldier, Sir Matthew Gournay, who married, as his first wife, Alice, widow of the last Baron Beauchamp of Hacche. After a short sketch of his adventurous career the intricate point as to how the manor in question, together with Sir Matthew's other estates, came into the hands of the Crown, is entered upon, and the statement in Hoare's Modern Wilts that the Crown acquired the reversion of these estates by express grant, is shown not to be supported by satisfactory evidence. The manor subsequently became part of the possessions of the Duchy of Cornwall, in exchange for that of Isleworth in Middlesex, which was given by the Crown to the Monastery there. Mr. Batten has added a copy of a presentment made in 1616 by the Homage of the Manor of Stoke, which is of interest as illustrative of the curious customs and forms of tenure then in force, and also a pedigree showing the descent of Sir Matthew Gournay, the latter having been compiled by Mr. B. W. Greenfield.

THE GILLMANS OF HIGHGATE. By Alexander W. Gillman. London (Elliot Stock).

This little book consists of a chapter culled from the author's "History of the Gillman Family," and is separately issued as being of more general interest than the larger work, on account of the details relating to the life of the poet Coleridge, which it contains. The author is a grandson of James and Ann Gillman, the gifted and amiable friends of the poet, in whose house at Highgate the latter resided for the last eighteen years of his life, and is, therefore, in a position to supply several interesting particulars not hitherto given to the public. As is well known Coleridge originally went to live with the Gillmans in order to be cured of the fatal habit of opium eating, and it is a satisfaction to be assured on such good authority that a complete cure was effected. Several unpublished letters of the poet are here produced, and it is impossible to read his references to his excellent host and charming hostess without realizing that both were possessed of no ordinary degree of mental culture; Mrs. Gillman especially must have been of a most lovable disposition, and we cannot doubt that her gentle influence had as much to do with the cure effected, as her husband's undoubted medical skill. The illustrations include three portraits of the poet and several of the Gillman family.

NOTES ON SHIPPO. By James L. Bowes. London (Kegan Paul, Trench Trübner and Co.).

This further treatise on the art of enamelling is full of interest to all who turn for inspiration to things Japanese, and like other works by Mr. Bowes, exhibits a deep knowledge of his subject and an infinite amount of antiquarian research. The word shippo is defined as representing seven precious things, viz, gold, silver, emerald, coral, agate, crystal, and pearl, not that these were necessarily employed in enamel work, but rather as suggesting the variety of beautiful colours of which the enamel pastes were composed. The antiquity of this art is proved by the fact of some existing shippo ware being traced to the eighth century, and it is very interesting to observe that the art was originally derived from the Chinese. Mr. Bowes is careful to point out that the gaudy coloured Japanese ware so largely imported into this country is very inferior to the ancient work, both in colour and workmanship. Our readers are more likely, however, to fix their attention on the portion of the book which gives a pedigree of the Hirata family, dating from the sixteenth century to present times. From the hands of this family and their pupils this most beautiful work has been produced.

OLD STOKE CHARITY. By B. W. Greenfield, M.A., F.S.A.

This pamphlet is a reprint from the Hampshire Field Club Papers and Proceedings. It contains an interesting description of the brasses and tombs in the Church of Stoke Charity, accompanied by illustrations, and by pedigrees of the allied families of Hampton, Waller, and Phelipps, who, together, held the manor of Stoke Charity for over three hundred years. There are also extracts relating to these families from the Parish Registers.

RECORDS AND PEDIGREE OF THE FAMILY OF MARYON OF ESSEX AND HERTS.
Compiled by John Ernest Maryon.

This publication is decidedly scrappy, the compiler, though he carries the pedigree back to 1633, being still uncertain as to the parentage of his own great-grandfather. We notice with pleasure that Mr. Maryon "hopes to produce a larger and more perfect record of the Maryon Family in a few years," and we trust that before doing so he will first exhaust every source of information open to the student of family history.

BAILEY'S PHOTO-ANCESTRAL RECORD. By the Rev. Frederic Bailey, B.D., Newhaven, Conn., U.S.A.

Mr. Bailey's system for preserving the history of a family is in many respects an improvement upon other methods which have come under our notice. The idea of including photographs of members of the family is a good one, and the system adopted is clear and simple. Provision is made for fourteen generations of both paternal and maternal lines of descent. Sufficient room has not, we think, been given for recording the children of each marriage, and much confusion is thus likely to ensue; the space allowed for the photographs is also very cramped. We should advise the omission of the cause of death, for unless the record is intended merely for the eye of the family physician there can be no use in adding such gruesome details. It occurs to us that if the old-fashioned family bibles are to be laid aside in favour of this or some kindred system, a way should be discovered by which the record may be from time to time added to by future generations, and better paper and a more elaborate cover should be provided, even at the risk of increasing the cost of production.

Two chart pedigrees have been forwarded to us, one of a branch of the family of Vincent, originally of Swinford, co. Leicester, compiled by Mr. Reginald Stewart Boddington, and the other of the Boddingtons of Great Harborough, Cubbington, and Kenilworth, co. Warwick, by Mr. W. F. Carter.

We have also received "The History of the Granville Family," by the Rev. Roger Granville, M.A., which we propose to notice in the next number.

Notes and Queries.

LE POHER FAMILY.—So much that is fantastic has been written on the origin of the name Poer, Poher, or Puher, that attention may be called to a charter of Roger "le Poher," in D'Anisy's Normandy Transcripts (Vol. ii, fo. 307), in which he styles himself son of John "le Poher," and speaks of Robert "le Poher," son of Bartholomew "le Poher," as his man. His seal bears the legend, "SIGILL' ROGERI LE POER," and the emblem of a fleur-de-lis. The county is Devonshire, whence the Irish Pohers are said to derive. This evidence coincides precisely with that in the charters, now at Eton, calendared by Mr. Maxwell Lyte,¹ which contain the names of several Pohers or Puhers, of the twelfth and thirteenth centuries in Somerset, the seals of John "Puher" and Nicholas "Poher," shewing for "device a fleur-de-lys."

I may add that, both in England and Ireland, the name is very frequently met with in the twelfth and thirteenth centuries, and that in the cases known to me, some scores in number, it is invariably Le Puher or Puher, Le Poher or Poher, or Poer.¹ The true form of the name is thus beyond question, and it is shewn to be personal, not territorial (as should indeed be obvious).

Wace speaks of "Les Boloigneis e les Pohiers" as fighting at the battle of Hastings, and this is always understood to mean "The men of Boulogne and of Poix" (in Picardy). The name, however, according to Godefroy, had, in old French, another recognised meaning, namely, "herald." In this sense its normal form was "le Pouhier." I hardly like to suggest that it was possibly corrupted from "Poigneor" (a fighter), though "Poignere" is found as "Ponhere" and "Punhiere." Probably "Pohier," with its two meanings, will be deemed a sufficient explanation, and will account for the frequent occurrence of the name, the families, no doubt, being unconnected.

Nevertheless, it is alleged, as in the monograph on the family by Mr. G. O'C. Redmond, that "the name is derived from the designation of one of the ancient independent states of Brittany . . . Le Poher, and . . . it may fairly be presumed that the family sprung (sic) from the counts or princes of Le Poher." As in the case of the "Hapsburg" Fieldings, double violence has been done to the facts to give colour to this hypothesis. The true forms of the name have been, in the above treatise, systematically and deliberately altered from Le to De Poher (or Puher), in order to make the name territorial. Similarly the Breton vicomté of "Porhöet" has been, most unjustifiably, altered to "Le Poher," to make its name approximate to that of this family. The former change may be partly due to insufficient perception of the difference between the personal "Le" and the territorial "De."

The strange thing is that this unfortunate jugglery should have been resorted to for a Norman house so ancient as that of "Le Poher."

J. H. ROUND.

DE LACI FAMILY.—The Domesday Survey for Herefordshire gives "Wigetune" as held by Urso de Abetot in capite, with a footnote that Roger de Laci holds this manor by exchange with Urso. The Pipe Roll Series of Charters (Vol. i) opens with a writ of William I to the Bishop and to the Sheriff of Lincoln, confirming the exchange which had been made by Urso de Abet. and Robert de Laceio of Ingolvesmera and "Witchona." If this latter place is the same as "Wacton," co. Hereford, as the Rev. C. J. Robinson thinks, what connection was there between Roger and Robert de Lacy? As Walter de Laci seems to have succeeded Earl William [f. Osbern] in the farm (?) of the county revenues, and Roger succeeded his father Walter, was the above exchange made following such a precedent as that for instance by which Hugh Lasne, who held Chenecestre [Kenchester] in capite, "accommodated" Earl William with one hide of that manor, that it might be given to King Meredith? This is to be noted; the Lincolnshire Survey (c. 1110) fol. 12, states that in Hawardeshon Wapentake, Roger de Laci holds 1 bovate in Newetuna and Alvoldabi of Walbert. L. J. K. B.

¹ In my "Feudal England" (pp. 176, 313), I have given instances which seem to prove the original form of the name in Domesday to have been "Ponther," and "Punher" the transitional form.

“THE OUTLAW MURRAY.”

The extraordinary conclusions arrived at by the author of a recently published work, entitled “A Scots Mediæval Architect,” demand a passing notice. The subject of his essay is introduced by the well known inscription at Melrose Abbey :—

JOHN : MOROW : SUM : TYM : CALLIT : WAS : I : AND : BORN : IN : PARYSSE :
 CERTAINLY : AND : HAD : IN : KEPYNG : AL : MASOUN : WERK : OF : SANTAN-DROYS : YE : HYE : KYRK : OF : GLASGW : MELROS : AND : PASLAY : OF :
 NYDDYSDAYLL : AND : OF : GALWAY : I : PRAY : TO : GOD : AND : MARI :
 BATH : AND : SWEET : S : JOHN : KEP : THIS : HALY : KYRK : FRA : SKAITH.

It is in the last chapter of his treatise that the reader is let into the secret of who this John Morow really was. His doings as an architect are dealt with in preceding chapters, and can be summarized as follows— (1) he appears after 1473 and disappears about 1512; (2) he carved inter alia the Royal arms at various places, therefore “that he was a Royal favourite may be held as certain”! (3) “the reason for his selecting Melrose Abbey for the site of his memorial tablet” was “because it was the Church of his own home.” Mr. Chalmers then proceeds to make this statement “John Morow can now be identified with the John Murray, who first appears in the pages of history, on his inclusion in the lease of Lewinshop, and Hangandshaw in Ettrick, with Patrick, his father, before 28th June, 1497,” by which he at one fell swoop identifies his protegé with the head of an important family and a person who may or may not have been the “Outlaw Murray” of the celebrated ballad,¹ but whom he accepts as such. Thus at a blow John Murray, of Falahill, becomes an architect and an outlaw, and furthermore, we are told he was the King’s “friend,”² and that on his obtaining a charter of the lands of Cranstoun-riddell “he was then John Murray, Esquire, of Fallohill.”³ His seal shows a hunting horn & in chief three mullets, and the arms of John Morow carved at Melrose are a fleur-de-lys & in chief three mullets, but John Morow, the architect, being also John Murray of Falahill (and outlaw) on his appointment to the Sheriffship of Selkirk, we are now told, substituted the hunting horn for the fleur-de-lys to denote that office. If this John Murray of Falahill was the first to use the hunting horn, it is far more likely to have come through his wife, Jonet Forrester, as is evident in the case of the fetterlock in the Blackbarony coat, which first appears after Andrew Murray’s marriage with Elizabeth Lockhart. It is certain that the arms of the last mentioned family were not settled until after this marriage, an interesting heraldic point, so another statement by Mr. Chalmers may be taken for what it is worth, viz., “John Murray who, as an Esquire, in 1497, must by that time have received a grant of arms, carved his arms on the tomb of Dervorgilla,” &c. In addition to the honours heaped upon this John Murray, “now discovered as a great Scots architect,” and “who has been known to every lover of the ballad literature of our country as 'The Outlaw Murray,' his patron goes still further by suggesting that he also wrote the ballad himself! His "grandfather" is moreover without any hesitation identified in these words, "John Murray,¹ the elder, was evidently the architect of St. Salvator's College, St. Andrews," while of his father we read, "there is little doubt that he also was an architect." Here we have three successive chiefs of an influential border family all identified as architects, without a suspicion of the fact leaking out through the Public Records. One of them in all probability was the genuine outlaw thus described in the ballad —

"The knight was armed capapie,
With a bended bow, on his milk white steed."

a description the wildest enthusiast, we should have thought, would be chary to associate with one plying the peaceful craft of a "practising mason." Shakespeare is said to have been a poacher as well as a poet and playwright, but Mr. Chalmers, without by the way producing a tittle of evidence, has discovered in John Morow, "whose business it was to design and execute the mason work of the buildings under his charge," a King's friend, the chief of a well known family, a sheriff, an outlaw with five hundred men at his back, and the singer of his own praises in verse.² The existence in the fifteenth century of such a person is too overpowering for the intelligence of an ordinary mind, so I propose to resolve him again into his component parts, taking for my own purpose a few of them only, and leaving his masonic qualification to the author of "A Scots Mediæval Architect."

My object in putting together the following notes on the early history of the family of Murray of Philiphaugh, is to approach more nearly to an identification of the Outlaw, and to draw attention to one or two points in favour of my supposition, which appear to have been overlooked in the past. The pedigree begins as under:—

Archibald of Murray, ob. ante 1321. [Erchebaud de Morref subscribed the oath of fealty to K. Edward I, 1296.]

Roger of Murray, of Fala in the barony of Heriot vic. Edinburgh, by grant from James, Lord of Douglas, 1 Sep. 1321, "pro servicio suo nobis impenso."

John of Murray, had a gift of the lands of Cranstoun-riddell from John Murray of Cranstoun, ob. ante 6 Mar. 1356-7.

William of Murray, s. and h., had a confirmation of his father's lands of Cranstoun-riddell 6 Mar. 1356-7.

The charter granted to this William was copied by a Notary Public in 1849 from the original extract in the possession of the Earl of Stair, and is as follows:—

David Dei gratia Rex Scotorum Omnibus probis hominibus Totius

In 1384 a William Watson had a charter under the Great Seal, on his resignation of Cranstoun-riddell, to him and the lawful heirs male of his body, which failing to Alexander of Murray, and the lawful heirs male of his body, which failing to George of Murray, brother of said Alexander, &c., 15 July 13 Robert II. In 1409 William Watson (son of William Watson, of Craniston) and his spouse got a charter of the lands of Trekware and Schelinglaw, on the resignation of William Watson, the father, to them and the lawful heirs of their bodies, which failing to Alexander of Murray, son of the deceased John of Murray of Blackbarony, &c. In 1463 the lands of Cranstoun-riddell, Traquair and others had been forfeited by a William Murray, then deceased. It was not till 1497 that Cranstoun-riddell was again in the possession of the family when John Murray of Falahill, on the resignation of John Murray of Blackbarony, got a Crown charter of these lands "cum superioritate." Thus it will be seen that the titles of Cranstoun-riddell as given above throw no light on the pedigree below William Murray, living 1357, and of those of Falahill I know nothing about. It is, therefore, impossible at the present to say how the Patrick Murray of Falahill, so designed in a Precept by Henry, Bishop of St. Andrews, dated 1413,¹ descended from Roger Murray, of Fala, neither is it proved whether or not his successor in Falahill, the John Murray

(whom Mr. Chalmers calls John Murray, the elder) was his son, nor is there evidence to show whether the succeeding Patrick Murray of Falahill (c. 1477-1492) was son of the said John.¹ From this Patrick, however, the pedigree is clear, and it is sufficient for my purpose to draw attention to a few facts only relative to the family from the year 1461 :—

John Murray of Falahill, who had a charter under the Great Seal 20 July 1461, of the lands of Philiphaugh was evidently the John of Murray appointed with John Turnbull in 1467 to take Inquisitions for Selkirk,² herdsman to the Queen in Ettrick Forest,³ and Keeper of Newark Castle.⁴ His successor was

Patrick Murray of Falahill, who was acquiring lands in the Philiphaugh between 1477 and 1492. He inherited from his brother Alexander, Canon of Moray, a house in Edinburgh, which he assigned to John, Lord Bothwell, by charter dated 1 Mar. 1485 "pro gratuitis consiliis et auxiliis." His son and heir was

John Murray of Falahill (considered by many to have been the "Outlaw") who had a charter under the Great Seal of the lands of Cranstoun-riddell, 5 Nov. 1497, being therein designed the King's familiaris armiger. In 1500 he, with David Hoppringill, in Tynnes, had a tack from the King for nine years of the Forest stead of Haining, and a similar tack in 1509 of Hangingshaw, Lewinshope and Harehead. The following year he had a Crown charter of Peilhill, and the burgh customs of Selkirk, with the office of Sheriff of Selkirk, in which he was seised 7 Jan. 1510. He was also seised 12 May 1497 of a great mansion house in Edinburgh, which Alexander, Lord Home, had given him, which house it appears later, 10 Nov. 1504, Lord Home granted to Mr. John Murray (afterwards of Blackbarony) for service "multipliciter impenso." John Murray of Falahill, married Jonet Forrester, before 1492,⁵ and was slain by Andrew Ker and Thomas Scott in 1510.⁶

The object of giving the above details of the family history, anterior to 1357 and subsequent to 1461, is to point out that for a hundred years before the latter date the movements of these Murrays are veiled in obscurity, and as we gather from the ballad that the hero was an unknown person to the King until he received word "That there was an outlaw in Ettricke Foreste, Counted him nought, nor a his courtrie gay," it is not unreasonable to suggest that the John Murray first appearing on the records as obtaining a legal holding in Selkirkshire in 1461 was the unruly person who "laid lee the country for many miles round"⁷ and no other. Moreover, it is pretty certain he must have been in Ettrick some time before the date referred to, and quite possible that he or his ancestors might have taken possession of lands in that part without interruption, if one realises the disturbed state of the country at that period. When asked of whom he held his lands "‘Thir landis are mine!’ the Outlaw said; ‘I ken nae King in Christentie; Frae Soudron I this Foreste wan, whan the King nor his Knights were not to see.’" These words were addressed to "James Boyde (the Earle of Arran his brother was he)," who, although differently styled in other copies of the ballad remains James Boyd, and it is a point worth emphasizing that the Boyds were in Royal favour in the middle of the fifteenth century, but that in 1469 Arran and his father were both forfeited. Sir Walter Scott did not consider it likely "that the circumstances mentioned in the ballad could occur under the reign of so vigorous a monarch as James IV," but on the other hand says, "James IV had particular reasons for desiring that Ettrick Forest which, actually formed part of the jointure lands of Margaret, his Queen, should be kept in a state of tranquility," an argument which would apply equally well in favour of the earlier John Murray. His appointment to take Inquisitions for Selkirk is also important, as it was not a far remove from the office of Sheriff, conferred on the later John Murray.

We have, therefore, the following facts connected with him—That until about 1460 he was apparently unknown, and that after that date he was in receipt of three appointments given him by the Sovereign, either as favours or for political reasons, and we also show that his successors held similar offices. It is not unreasonable to infer from such evidence that the Outlaw was the earlier John Murray of Falahill, and not he who can, in my opinion, be satisfactory accounted for during his possession of the family estates, but I do not for a moment suggest that I have identified him as such. I should not have been tempted to touch the matter at all had not Mr. Chalmers identified (a process in this case peculiar to himself) a John Morvo, an architect, with the earlier John Murray, and John Morow, another architect, with the later, and in the course of his argument thrown in the intermediate possessör of Falahill as following the same profession, an extraordinary medley of improbabilities which utterly prevents any one of his statements being of the slightest value.

KEITH W. MURRAY.

LE POHER.

By COUNT DE LA POER.

In the last number of The Genealogist, under "Notes and Queries," Mr. J. H. Round, in his reference to the Le Pohers, states that Mr. Redmond has in his memoir of that family, "systematically and deliberately altered" (the surname) "from Le to De Poher (or Puher) in order to make the name territorial. Similarly the Breton vicomté of 'Porhöet' has been, most unjustifiably, altered to 'Le Poher,' to make its name approximate to that of this family." I now propose to give such evidence, as will show, firstly, that Le P'ohér is a territorial name, and secondly that, Mr. Redmond did not alter Porh'ôet into Le P'ohér.

The "Annuaire Historique et Archiologique de Bretagne," by A. de Borderie, 1861, gives the divisions of Brittany in the sixth century as follows:—La Domnonée, La Cornouaille, Le Browerech ou Vannetais breton, Le Léon, Le P'ohér. Referring to Le P'ohér, the author of this work says, "Quant au comté de P'ohér, on doit le considerer comme un démembrement du royaume de Cornouaille, opéré dans le cours du vi siècle. Il comprenait la partie septentrionale de l'ancien diocèse de Quimper . . . Il avait pour chef-lieu la petite ville de Ker-ahés ou Carhaix . . . et de là venait le nom du comté : car P'ohér n'est qu'une contraction de Pou-Caer, deux mots bretons qui se traduisent littéralement par 'Pagus Urbis,' Pays de la Ville," the "Ville" being Carhaix. In the same work mention is made of Comorre as first Count of P'ohér, who, on account of his cruelty was surnamed "le Maudit," and that he died 554. Under heading of "Le P'ohér" (p. 152), the same author says, "Quelques-uns de nos anciens Auteurs ont fait de Comorre un comte de Léon; c'est une erreur. Le Baud (tout en tombant lui-même dans cette erreur) nous dit, d'après Ingomar, que 'le siège de Comorus estoit á Krhoes,' c'est-à-dire á Kerahés, qui est Carhaix. Or, il est incontestable que Carhaix . . . n'a jamais été la capitale du pays de Léon, mais bien de celui de Pou-Caer ou P'ohér." This work contains other references to the Counts of P'ohér, and amongst them the following, "nous les retrouvons au ix siècle dans les titres du cartulaire de Redon, avec toute la figure et la situation des grands comtes de Bretagne."

In the "Dictionnaire Historique et Géographique de Bretagne," by Ogée, enlarged by Marteville and Varin, 1845, under the article on Carhaix or Ker-aes, it will be found that Carhaix was the "Chef-lieu" of the "Comté de P'ohér," formerly "Pou-Kaer," or "Pouhaer," meaning "Pays de la Ville," that this "Comté" was one of the first great fiefs united to the Duchy of Brittany, and that this union was brought about by Duke Alain, called Barbe-torte, son of Mathuédoi, ii, "Comte de P'ohér," in the tenth century. That then Viscounts of P'ohér appear, and that this title continued down to the middle of the fifteenth century, when it is lost sight of. In the same work mention is made of Cleden-P'ohér, a village near Carhaix, and which formerly formed part of the "Comté de P'ohér."

In the "Biographie Breton," by Levot (page 46), Alain Barbe-torte is mentioned as son of "Mathuédoi, Comte de P'ohér." At page 548, Comorre is referred to as having been "souverain" of a district called Pou-Kaer by the Bretons, and P'ohér by contraction. In the second volume of the same work, under "P'ohér," an account of the former Archdeaconry of "le P'ohér" in the Diocese of Quimper is given, and mention made of a "Prince du P'ohér."

Dom Morice and Dom Lobineau, Benedictine annalists, also make mention of the Counts of P'ohér. I think now that I have given evidence sufficient to show that Le P'ohér is a territorial name. And now as to Mr. Redmond's supposed "unjustifiable" alteration of Porhöet into Poher. In the "Annuaire" and "Dictionnaire" already quoted from it will be found that Porhöet, originally "Poutré-coat," is in the Diocese of St. Malo, and means "Pagus trans sylvam," whereas "le Poher," originally "Pou-Caër," was in the Diocese of Quimper, and means "Pagus Urbis."

Wace mentions "li Boilognez e li Pohiers," as taking part in the battle of Hastings, many Bretons served under William, and as Le Poher sometimes appears as "le Pohier," it seems to me that the correct rendering of the above should be, not "the men of Boulogne and of Poix," but "the men of Boulogne and the Pohers."

THE REGISTERS OF CHRIST CHURCH, NEWGATE STREET.

All genealogists must acknowledge the great value of the work which the Harleian Society is doing in printing London Parish Registers, and must feel that they owe a debt of gratitude to those gentlemen who, in connection with the editing of the printed volumes, place their time at the service of the public. It is, however, necessary to regard the Society's last issue with a critical eye.

The earliest register of Christ Church parish is a transcript made in 1586, and continued to 1588,¹ and the untrustworthiness of this MS. is proved by the fact that the designations of the respective years are for the most part given therein incorrectly, and that there are many obvious misreadings, such as Sluellen for Fluellen (p. 195), Morys for Norys (p. 197), Elsecke for Elfecke (p. 205), Bont for Boughe (p. 261), Bramond for Beamond (Beaumont) (p. 281). These corrections are suggested by comparing the entries with marriage licences and with wills. The burial of John Christopherson, Bishop of Chichester, appears as "my lorde of Chychester," and later "Christopher bushoppe of Chychester," but neither of the two dates of burial corresponds to the date of the Bishop's death. Again, Richard Jugge, the printer, is described (burial August 18, 1577) as "paynter to the Queen's Majesty."

But in addition to these errors in the early transcript itself there are many other misreadings in the copy made for the Harleian Society. The letter u which (as was usual) frequently occurs in the MS. as an equivalent to v, is in a large number of instances misread as n, and so we find in the printed register many persons with Stenen, Christoner, as their christian names. But this error becomes serious in the case of the cognomen. In the text and in the index will be found such names as Musgrane, Stenen, Stenenson, Ponderpache Ingge (i.e. Jugge or Judge), Ine, Ines, Ingson (= Juxon), Inickes, Unidall, etc., and by converse error Jucent, Vukell, Yuglishe, Remnaute, etc. The "p" of the MS. is treated as a simple "p," so that we find such entries as Coppwhet, Pepp, Psivall. A person whose name was Steven Harper occurs twice in the index, in the one case as HARP, Stenen, and in the other as COWPER, Stenen Harper. Again Laurence Mylborne, also a cooper, is in one instance indexed under his surname, and in another case under "Cowper." John Mary priest is indexed as Preste. The letter f was also a stumbling-block to the Society's transcriber, and so we find the christian name Ralph disguised as "Rass" and "Rase," and surnames Grafton, Morecraft, as Graston, Morecrast. Amongst other misreadings revealed by a cursory examination are Yopall for Yoxall, Erysdall for Trysdall, Xaskyn (Hustwayte) for Paskyn, Astne for Ascue, Pepivell for Pepwell, Furnell for Curnell, Civilsande for Olsande, Sunth for Smith, Woundle for Wommerle, Runruye for Rumnye.

The Editor has introduced the word "sic" in a somewhat misleading way. On page 259 we find under 1551 "July 5 John Joone [sic] Martyne," but in the MS. the word "John" is struck through. Again on p. 261 a year's group of names is headed "1556 [sic]," which really means that the Editor has,—wrongly as I am about to show—substituted that date for the one which he actually found.

The most unfortunate error in the volume is one which might have been avoided. The Editor tells us (p. viii) that "in the marriages the year 1538 in the original has been altered by a later hand to 1542 and in the burials to 1540, with a corresponding alteration in subsequent years until 1587," and that he thought it better "to adhere to the years as altered in the original book." But a comparison of the register with the Harleian Society's volumes of Marriage Licences amply proves that although most of the dates of marriages for the period in question were incorrect as they originally stood in the MS., they are all wrong "as altered." Similarly the British Record Society's Index to Wills proved (previous to 1559) in the Prerogative Court of Canterbury shows that as regards burials also, both readings of the dates are erroneous. I have taken a great deal of pains in an attempt to ascertain what should have been the respective headings to the years in question and with fairly successful results, although I failed to get evidence to verify each separate year. To begin with marriages, the years printed as 1542 to 1554 inclusive, are in fact 1540 to 1552. The (legal) year 1553 is wanting throughout the register (the three baptisms ascribed to that year belonging to 1552). Resuming with marriages "1555," that, and all succeeding years to "1588" inclusive, require to be ante-dated one year. The dates of the burials are more puzzling, 1540-1-2-3 should read 1538-9-40-1. The next yearly group ("1544") seems to be redundant, and I cannot say to what year the entries refer. Then "1545" is really 1542, and the succeeding years to 1555 require corresponding alteration, the last named year thus becoming 1552. The next two groups, both called 1556, appear to refer to 1554.¹ The next group "1557" is really 1555, and the succeeding groups ("1558," etc.) represent the years 1556, etc., in proper sequence, so that "1584" on page 279 becomes 1583, and "1584" on page 280 is correct, as are likewise the four remaining years to 1588.

¹ There is great confusion in this part of the register. John Dodge and John Blacknolle must have been buried in April 1554, and John Sheppard in the following January. See their wills and probates.

There is one more comment to make respecting this volume. Christ Church parish was constituted towards the end of 1546, and the Grey Friars' Chronicle states that on the 3rd of January 1546-7 "was sette opyn the churche agayen that was sometyme the Grayfreeres and masse sayd at the auteres wyth dyvers presttes and it was namyd Crystys churche." But the register dates from more than eight years earlier, i.e., 1538. Here again the difficulty is solved by referring to wills of some of the persons whose burials are recorded during the period in question, which wills sufficiently prove that the entries for those eight years relate to the parish of St. Nicholas Shambles.

PEDIGREE OF THE LORDS BURGH OF GAINSBOROUGH.

This account of a family of distinction (of which all previous ones are singularly dateless and inaccurate) is compiled by the Rev. Robert Eden Cole, M.A., Rector of Doddington, co. Lincoln, in which parish part of their possessions lay. It may be added that William, the fourth Lord, was bur. 2 Oct. 1584 "from Lambeth" at Lingfield, co. Surrey, and that his widow Katharine (Clinton) was bur. there 14 Aug. 1621. The burial at Gainsborough, 3 July 1599, of "Robert Burgh of Gainsborough" is in all probability that of Robert, the last Lord, who was living 30 May 1598, being then about four years old, and who was dead before 1601.

ADDITIONS TO TABLE XXX.

A. 9. He was slain at the Battle of Bastweiler. (Eldest son of John of Luxemburg, Seigneur de Ligny, Roussy and Beaurevoir, Châtelain de Lille, by his first wife Alice, only child of Guy of Flanders, Seigneur de Richebourg.)

A. 10. She was m. by contract dated at Beauvais in Dec. 1350.³ (Her mother was Jane,⁴ elder dau. of John, Seigneur de Fiennes and Tingry, Châtelain de Bourbourg.)

A. 11. (A younger son of Walter III, Seigneur d'Enghien, by Isabel,⁶ Duchess of Athens, Countess of Brienne, only dau. of Walter de Brienne V, Duke of Athens, Count of Brienne and Lecce.)

A. 13. He was bur. in the Church of San Domenico at Naples. [He m. 1, 130 $\frac{8}{9}$, before 24 Jan., Beatrice, widow (31 Jan. 130 $\frac{7}{8}$) of Azzo VIII, Marquis of Este and Ancona, and dau. of Charles II, King of Jerusalem and Sicily; she d. in 1321, bur. at Andria] (Younger son¹⁰ of Bertrand II, Seigneur de Berre in Provence, by Berengaria.)

A. 14. She was Signora di Tiano and Carinola in the Terra di Lavoro, di Caramanico in the Abruzzo, and di Cassano in Calabria.¹¹ (Her mother was Isabella,¹¹ widow of John della Lagonessa,¹¹ and dau. of William Standardo, Constable of Sicily.)¹¹

A. 15. He was bur. at Nola.¹² (Elder son of Robert Orsini,¹³ Count of Nola, by Sueva,¹⁴ dau. of Hugh del Balzo, Seneschal of Sicily.)

A. 16. (Dau. of William, Count of Ariano, by his second wife Francesca, dau. of Roger, Count of Celano.)

B. 6. [She m. 1, Jacopo di San Severino.]¹⁸

B. 7. He was Count of Montescaglioso and Andria, Seigneur de Berre, Mison and Tiano; cr. Duke of Andria betw. 30 June 1350 and 20 May 1351;¹⁹ bur. at Andria. [He m. 1, 1337, Louisa, dau. of Thomas di San Severino III, Count of Marsico, Constable of Sicily. He m. 2, 1348, Margaret, dau. of Philip of Sicily I, Prince of Taranto and Achaia; she d. at Naples abt. Sep. 1380, bur. there in the Church of San Domenico.]

C. 1. He succ. his elder br. Thomas abt. 1435.²²

C. 3. He was made a Knight of the Golden Fleece at the institution of the Order, 10 Jan. 14 $\frac{2}{3}$ $\frac{0}{10}$; d. at Rambures, bur. (as was his wife) in the Abbey of Cercamp in Artois.

D. 2. [She m. 1, as second wife, at Therouanne, 20 Apr. 1433, John, Duke of Bedford, K.G.; he (b. 20 June 1389) d. at Rouen 15 Sep.²⁴ 1435, bur. there in the Metrop. Church.]

E. [She m. 1, John Grey of Groby; he (b. 1435) was slain at the Battle of St. Albans, 17 Feb. 1460.]

² Hss. of her br. Guy de Châtillon IV, Count of St. Pol, who d. s.p. in 1360.

³ DuChesne, M. de Châtillon, preuves, p. 182.

⁴ Hss. of her br. Robert, called Moreau, Seigneur de Fiennes and Tingry, Châtelain de Bourbourg, Constable of France.

⁵ He succ. his nephew Walter as Count of Brienne and Seigneur d'Enghien in 1381.

⁶ Hss. of her br. Walter VI, Duke of Athens, etc., Constable of France, slain at Poitiers 19 Sep. 1356.

⁷ Details of her parentage appear to be wanting. She is not mentioned by Ammirato (Fam. nobili Napol. tom. i, 1580, pp. 5—37) or by Imhoff (Geneal. xx in Italia famil., pp. 291—306) in their pedigrees of San Severino. She was, perhaps, the same as Jane, dau. of Roger, Count of Mileto, by Marchesa del Balzo, his second wife.

⁸ For the Neapolitan branch of del Balzo (des Baux) see especially F. della Marra, Discorsi delle famiglie estinte, 1641, pp. 65-88; also Sc. Ammirato (Fam. nobili Napol., tom. ii, 1651, p. 242) and F. Sansovino (Origine delle famiglie illustri d'Italia, 1670, p. 19). Apparently the only genealogy of the whole house of des Baux is that by Pithon-Curt, Hist. de Venaissin, 1743-50, tom. iv, pp. 252—367). He is followed by Barthelemy (Inventaire des Chartes de la Maison de Baux, 1882) who analyses nearly 2,000 charters relating to the family. The pedigrees of Baux by N. Vignier (Hist. de Luxembourg, 1617, p. 239) are useless; that by Henninges (Theatrum Geneal., 1598, tom. iv, p. 1329) is a most extraordinary performance.

⁹ By charter, dated 5 Jan. 130³, Charles II, King of Sicily, granted to Bertrand del Balzo the Comté of Montescaglioso in Basilicata, which had belonged to his son Peter. He was cr. Count of Andria in Apulia before 18 Jan. 130³, and Count of Squillace in further Calabria by 1311. In letters dated 24 Jan. 130³, Charles II styles him his son-in-law. He received the Seigneurie of Mison in Provence 17 June 1346. (Barthelemy, nos. 920, 922, 963, 924, 1281).

¹⁰ He succ. his br. William (who d. s.p.) as Seigneur de Berre abt. 1344.

¹¹ Ferrante della Marra, pp. 26, 76, 401.

¹² Litta, Fam. celebri Italiane, 1819-89, ped. of Orsini, tav. 10, 11. His will was dated 14 Feb. 1399 and he d. soon after.

¹⁴ Hss. of her brother Raymond, Count of Soletto, Marshal of Sicily, who d. s.p.l. 5 Aug. 1375.

¹⁵ Litta, ped. of Orsini, tav. 11, calls her Gorizia. He also pretends that Count Nicolas had a second wife Maria, only dau. of Raymond, Count of Soletto, who really d. s.p. For by letters dated at the Castle of l'Oeuf, near Naples, 18 Oct. 1375, Queen Jane gave to John d'Arcussia di Capra, Count of Minervino, Signore d'Altamura, Chamberlain of Sicily, various castles and bourgs, which had reverted to the crown by the death s.p.l. of Raymond del Balzo, Count of Soletto, to the exclusion of Nicolas Orsini, Count Palatine and of Nola, his nephew, who had himself acknowledged that he had no rights in the feudal goods of his uncle. (Barthelemy, no. 1520).

¹⁶ He was Viceroy and Captain-general of the terra di Lavoro, of Molise and the Abruzzo. The best pedigree of de Sabran is in La Chenaye des Bois, suppl., tom. xv, pp. 542—555.

¹⁷ She is called dau. of Cobron, alias Morend of Yerley. But see note 22.

¹⁸ Butkens, Trophées de Brabant, tom. ii, p. 120. He was, perhaps, Jacopo, Signore di Terlizzi, who d. s.p. before 1391.

¹⁹ Barthelemy, nos. 1311, 1322.

²⁰ Sc. Ammirato, tom. ii, p. 242. By his will, dated at Andria, 23 Apr. 1422 (sic, but probably read iiii for xxii) he names as his universal heir his elder son William, born of his wife Sueva Orsini, and disinherits his yr. son Bianchino, born of the said Sueva, because he was an evil liver, a gamester, and guilty of many misdeeds. He desires to be bur. without pomp in the Church of Andria. (Private Archives of Raymondo del Balzo, Duke of Pressenzano, at Naples—Barthelemy, no. 1768.)

²¹ Genealogists call her also Justina and Renata. But see note 20.

²² The will of this Thomas, dated 13 Hen. VI, mentions his grandparents, Thomas Lyons and Margaret his wife. (Top. and Gen., vol. i, p. 160.)

²³ He obtained possession of the Comté of St. Pol, the Châtellenie of Lille and the Seigneurie of Fiennes abt. 1430.

²⁴ 15 Sep., betw. 2 and 3 in the morning. See Ramsay's Lancaster and York.

SIR JOHN FERNE.

At the present time when the publication of the State Papers and the Cecil MSS. is bringing to light many interesting details of the active part played by Sir John Ferne in history, I think the following notes concerning him may not be without interest to genealogists. Appointed Deputy Secretary of the Council of the North by Queen Elizabeth 13th Aug. 1595, he was knighted at Whitehall by King James, 30th May 1604,¹ and before the 7th June in the same year was made Secretary of that Council. The date of his death does not seem hitherto to have been known, but the following Inq. p.m. 8 Jas. I, Part i, No. 69, at the Public Record Office enables me, as will be seen, to supply it.

Inquisition taken at Lincoln Castle 26th July, 8 James I [1609], before John Anderson, Esq., Escheator, on the death of Sir John Ferne, Knt, late of Temple Belwood in the County of Lincoln, on the oaths of William Snell of Thorpe on the Hill, Robert Clyffe, Thomas Clyffe,

Who say that the said Sir John Ferne Knt. was seised of two messuages etc. in Temple Belwood, parcel of the præceptory of Willough-ton, late belonging to the Hospital of St. John of Jerusalem in England, acquired by his father William Ferne from Henry Welby Esq., and George Blithe, Gentleman, by Indenture 13th Dec^r 16 Eliz. Also lands etc. in Belton co Lincoln late belonging to the Monastery of Axholme formerly in the several occupations of Thomas Thornton, and Thomas Barland alias Garland, acquired by the said William Ferne from Edmund Downing, Gentleman, and John Walker; also a messuage in Belton late in occupation of Thomas Cade, and a messuage late in occupation of Edward Sympson alias Sampson, by Indenture 12th March 21 Eliz. He was also seised of other lands all of which were possessions of the Chantry of the Blessed Mary in Belton, late in the several occupations of Thomas Thornton, John Tyndall, Thos. Selande, Richard Peacocke, Alexander Swayne, Robert Scotte, John Turner, John Broke, Thos. Peacocke, and John Thornton, acquired from Edmund Downing, Gentleman, and John Walker 12 April 21 Eliz.; and that the above are held of the Manor of East Greenwich in Kent in free socage, and not in capite, nor by military service. The said Sir John Ferne died the 20th June 1609, and that William Ferne Esq, is his son and heir, and was aged 25 years, or thereabout when his father died.

In Stonehouse's "History of the Isle of Axholme" mention is made of an inscription formerly on a white stone in the chancel of Belton Church as follows:—"Here lyeth the Body of John Ferne son to William Ferne Esq^{re}, who died the 26th August A.D. 1615. Here also lyeth the Body of Johan Ferne wife to the said William Ferne, who died upon the third day of Sept. A.D. 1616." The author seems to have been in doubt as to who this John Ferne really was, and gives an incorrect pedigree of the family. However, with the assistance of the Inquisition and the pedigrees printed in the "Visitation of Lincolnshire" (Genealogist, vol. iv) and the "Visitation of Staffordshire, 1583," vol. iii (W. Salt Arch. Soc.) this point becomes clear. The John Ferne in question was Sir John's grandson, and Johan Ferne was the wife of his son William, and daughter of Robert Wilkes of Islington, co. Middx. The pedigree entered in the Staffordshire Visitation is signed by Sir John Ferne, and his son and heir William is there stated to have been born in October 1583, which agrees with the age in the Inquisition. He published the "Blazon of Gentry" in 1586. The Lincolnshire Visitation shows Sir John to have had eight sons and three daughters. The eighth son was the celebrated Henry Ferne, Bishop of Chester, probably born at York, the Chaplain and companion of Charles I, who entered St. Mary's Hall, Oxon., 1618, died 16th March 1661-2, aged 59;¹ bur. in St. Edmund's Chapel, Westminster Abbey. Mathew, another son, was of Broad Street, London (vide "Visitation of London," Harl. Soc., vol. i, p. 271); his will was proved P.C.C. (119 Coventry) 23rd Sept. 1640.

The will of Sir John Ferne may be at Lincoln or York, it does not appear to have been proved in London.

An account of the "Parliamentary" Roll of Arms may be found in Genealogist, vol. v., p. 14. The above is the version from the Cotton MS. Caligula A. xvij. For the convenience of readers the entries have been numbered, and a point placed between name and blazon, but in all other respects the manuscript has been carefully and literally followed. In the printed copy, as in the manuscript, the letter "y" takes the place of the "thorn" letter. The italics signify entries added in a later hand, which, though the writer has striven to assimilate it to the earlier script, is evidently no earlier than the end of the fifteenth century.

THE HISTORY OF THE GRANVILLE FAMILY, traced back to Rollo, first Duke of Normandy. By Roger Granville, M.A., Rector of Bideford. Exeter (William Pollard and Co.).

On taking up this goodly volume, dealing as it does with the history of one of the most ancient and interesting of English families, we were led to expect a rare genealogical treat, an expectation which has, in part at least, been fully realized. If Mr. Granville had been content to confine his attention to that part of the Grenville pedigree which is well within the scope of comparatively modern history, and to editing the valuable collection of family letters which constitute far the most interesting portion of the book, we should have had nothing but praise to utter. Unfortunately something more than mere editorial skill is needed in dealing with a pedigree which professes to stretch back in direct male line to Rollo, Duke of Normandy. A profound knowledge of early genealogy, and the ability to sift that which is true from that which is false in the work of others are also requisite. That the author of this book is somewhat lacking in these qualities is evident from his acceptance, in defiance of dates and other probabilities, of the boasted claim of the Grenvilles to descend from the Conqueror's kinsman, Hamon Dentatus, through a supposed younger son, Richard de Grenville. Now all that appears to be known concerning this Richard is that he was a tenant of the honour of Gloucester under Robert, Earl of Gloucester, and his wife Mabel, daughter of Robert Fitzhamon, and grand-daughter of Hamon Dentatus, and that he founded Neath Abbey circa 1129, though here said to have come over at the Conquest. Richard de Grenville's first wife, we are told, was "Isabel, the only daughter of Walter Gifford, Earl of Buckingham, in England, and of Longueville, in Normandy, who was coheirress with her aunt Rohesia (wife of Richard Fitz Gilbert, Lord of Clare) of the great possessions and lordships pertaining to that family." According to the best modern authorities Rohesia was sister and eventual coheir of Walter Gifford, first Earl of Buckingham, and it is hardly necessary to point out that she certainly would not have been coheir to her brother had he had a daughter leaving issue by Richard de Grenville. For the statement that Richard's son married "Adelina, daughter of Robert de Bellemont, Earl of Mellent in France and first Earl of Leicester in England," and widow of Hugh Montfort, no authority is given, and it must therefore be received with caution. We must add that we are by no means prepared to accept Mr. Granville's identification of William, a younger son of the first Richard de Grenville, with William de Corbeil, Archbishop of Canterbury, or to acknowledge the descent of the Buckinghamshire Grenvilles, as it is here given, from the Devonshire stock. But to proceed with the pedigree. Richard, the founder of Neath Abbey, was succeeded by his son Richard, who is said to have died while on crusade 1147. His son and heir, also named Richard, is here stated to have been knighted in 1200, i.e., fifty-three years after his father's death, and to have died four years subsequently, leaving a youthful family, all under age, and a widow young enough to marry again! It is unfortunate that no reference is given to the charter of 14th Sept. 1204, quoted on p. 31, for it is impossible to make much of the abstract given. Neither are we told the place of custody of the confirmation charter on pages 32-33, which is the more to be regretted as the seal appended thereto is said to be charged with the Grenville arms, and might therefore give some definite clue as to when this curious coat was first assumed. Mr. Granville, referring to a letter written by Dennis Granville, Dean of Durham, during his exile in France after the deposition of James II, tells us that the Dean found these arms on the tomb of Hamon Dentatus at Corbeil; and also that previously to the end of the seventeenth century they existed on one of the citadel gates of the town of Granville in Normandy. Our readers will, however, remember Mr. Planché's suggestion that the three clavions were borrowed from a badge of the De Clares, under whom the Grenvilles held their lands. Again, had the date of the writ of dower, mentioned on page 34, as having been brought by Jane, widow of Richard Grenville (here styled the fifth) been given to us, we might have been enabled to test the truth of the identification of the lady's husband with the Richard de Greynvill, who according to Annales de Theokesberia was in 1241 buried "in capitulo Sancti Jacobi Bristolis." If this identification be correct Richard's son, Bartholomew, must have survived his father by about eighty-five years. The pedigree is at this point supported in substance by the excellent evidence of the Plea Rolls (Genealogist, N.S., vol. x, p. 92), and Mr. Granville is entitled to the credit of having avoided the errors into which some other compilers of Grenville pedigrees have fallen. But why does he add "Earl of Mellent" to the name of Thomas Beaumont, whose daughter Joyce married Sir Theobald Grenville? We may now pass to the latter part of the pedigree, which may be said to commence with Sir Richard Grenville, the hero of "the Revenge." Sir Richard's memory will always be dear to his countrymen, and at the present time when England may be again about to enter upon another struggle for naval supremacy, the story of his gallant fight acquires renewed interest. The indomitable spirit of Sir Richard was inherited by his grandson, the chivalrous Sir Bevill, who amid the troublous times in which he passed his life, from his early youth, when he was inclined to follow Sir John Eliot, in opposition to the arbitrary measures of his sovereign, till his death at the battle of Lansdowne, loyally fighting for that sovereign's crown, was honoured alike by friends and foes. The letters which are here published between Sir Bevill and his wife are of the greatest interest, and help us to form a true understanding of their mode of life and habits of thought. No one can read them and the other family correspondence included in this work without regretting that a large collection of Grenville letters were, according to Mr. Granville's preface, ruthlessly destroyed by George, Lord Carteret, in the early part of the present century. Sir Bevill's anxiety about the education of his son is almost painful to read, especially when we remember that he was fated to lose him just as he was entering upon manhood. In strange contrast to Sir Bevill was his brother Sir Richard, whose temper embittered by his unhappy quarrels with his wife, rendered him odious even to his own party. A certain degree of uncertainty seems to surround Sir Richard's only son, who in the pedigree which accompanies the volume, is said to have been "hanged by the Roundheads." The truth of this statement seems to be very doubtful, and perhaps the tradition arose from the story which we find on page 282. Sir Bevill's eldest surviving son was at the Restoration created Earl of Bath, and is now represented as senior coheir by the Duke of Sutherland; while from his (Sir Bevill's) third son Bernard, the present author derives, also however in the female line, for the Grenvilles of Stow have for more than a century been without a known male heir, a fate which has quite recently befallen their namesakes the Grenvilles of Wotton. The book is illustrated with photographs of family portraits, which the reader will no doubt be glad to possess, for he cannot fail to be fascinated with the many brilliant and interesting characters which the Grenville family has produced.

SEARCHES INTO THE HISTORY OF THE GILLMAN OR GILMAN FAMILY.
By Alexander W. Gillman. London (Elliot Stock).

In our last issue a notice appeared of a portion of this volume, "The Gillmans of Highgate," and we now propose to deal with the whole work containing accounts of various families of Gilman or Gillman. It is unnecessary to dwell on the mystic descent of a certain Cylmyn Droed Dhu temp. 820, as it is clear that, except for the fact that arms similar to those ascribed to him by Welsh bards were granted by Elizabethan Heralds to a Gylemin of Troyle in Anglesea and a Gilman of Surrey, there is nothing to show that he had any descendants of the name of Gilman. The author gives a pedigree from this Cylmyn which, though in reality his own compilation, he says is "from the 'Heraldic Visitation of Wales,' by Lewys Dwnn, in 1586, and Harleian MSS., No. 1969, British Museum, the 'English Baronetage' 1741, and other sources." On this pedigree hangs the value of Mr. Gillman's deductions, which will be found to be without an iota of evidence to support them. In fact they are incorrect. From Cylmyn Droed Dhu about a dozen generations are given, to none of which appears the name of Cylmyn or Gilman, but we read that a Richard ap Robert ap Meredydd, living in the sixteenth century, "took the surname of Gylmyn, after his ancestor Gilmin Droed Dhu," living in the ninth century! Such an extraordinary statement appeared to demand an examination of the Harl. MS. 1969 quoted, and we find that this Richard is not called Gylmyn, and moreover in other and more reliable MSS. to which the author has access, he is called Richard Glyn, that he had a brother William Glyn, a brother Edmond Glyn, a son William Glyn, and a grandson William Glyn, and apparently no son John. He is styled of Nanlhey in Carnarvonshire, and not of Troyle. The author continues his pedigree to a John Gilman, whom he makes the ancestor of an Irish family, yet later on acknowledges that a wide search has been ineffectual to prove this point. The latter conjecture is probably not far off the mark, but the attempted identification of Richard, father of John Gilman of Troyle, with Richard ap Robert ap Meredydd is untenable. Of the various families of the name contained in this volume we note that the Gilmans of Norfolk and America are derived from a common ancestor, one Edward Gilman of Caston, who died in 1573; the Gilmans of Belgium from a Thomas, living at the end of the fifteenth century; the Gilmans of China from an Anthony, of Wilts, born 1734; the Gilmans of Highgate (the author's family) from John, of Great Yarmouth, married 1777; the Gilmans of Ireland (referred to above) from John, of Curraheen, who died 1644, and pedigrees culled from the College of Arms and the British Museum are also given. The volume being stamped with the coat and crest granted in 1584 may possibly mislead persons whose names appear in this publication into thinking themselves entitled to use them as the family insignia, but the name Gilman suggests other derivations than that from Cylmyn with the Black Leg, although such a possibility is not touched upon in the chapter on the orthography of the name. Viewed as a collection, this effort of Mr. Alexander W. Gillman is a distinct addition to genealogical works, provided his problematical deductions are ignored by the reader. The illustrations are good, and the chart pedigrees from official sources are valuable.

PREHISTORIC MAN IN AYRSHIRE. By John Smith. London. (Elliot Stock.)

Mr. Smith has dealt with a difficult subject in a painstaking and capable manner. Both the antiquary and the geologist will appreciate the numerous illustrations, which greatly add to the utility and attractiveness of the work. A map of Prehistoric Ayrshire forms the frontispiece.

Notes and Queries.

FARAMUS OF BOULOGNE.—The Red Book of the Exchequer supplements the Pipe Rolls, shewing that Faramus held his Wendover estate as early as 1157. King Henry's charter to him, therefore, must belong to that year.

On p. 312 of the Third Report on Historical MSS. there is calendared a grant, by the Burgesses of Bridgwater, of a burgage to Faramus, the dyer, in the time of Edward I. Bridgwater is sufficiently near to Martock to make it probable that he was in some way of the stock of Faramus of Boulogne.

J. H. ROUND.

LE POHER FAMILY.—I am glad to see Mr. Round exposing the attempt (or as he rightly calls it the "jugglery") to turn the "le" into "de." Just the same thing was tried with the Howards. Le Heyward became "de Howard"

Le Poer, Le Pouvre, Le Povere, le Povre, and le Powre, all occur in my Calendar to Norfolk Fines. Some of the names may mean, as Mr. Round suggests, le Pouchier, but the majority surely mean "the poor man" simply.

May I append a query? What is the meaning of the surname Le Peyvere—very common with us in Norfolk?

WALTER RYE.

RIDDELL OF RIDDELL.—A recent leader in the Daily News says of this family "they can show a Pope's Bull of the tenth century authorizing the then Riddell to marry a relation within the forbidden degrees, so says Sir Walter Scott."

Can any of your readers say what foundation there is for this statement?

A SOUTHRON.

WADE FAMILY OF AMERICA AND ENGLAND.—At the request of many members of the family the undersigned is collecting genealogical material for a history of the Wade family, especially of the descendants of Jonathan Wade, who landed in New England in 1632. All English material will be most gratefully acknowledged and included in the work. Correspondence with any English members of the family is solicited.

Roode. It is nuncupative, and styles him late of Street deceased, it further states that it was made about Shrovetide in 1643, when the said Philip Roode was about to go as a soldier, in the presence of Abraham Frie and Henry Frie both of Street. He confirmed the same by word of mouth in the presence of Hugh Crane of Street. By this will he gave all he possessed to his brother Roger Roode. Peter Glasbrooke declares that the said witnesses had been examined as to the truth of the same.

The above Philip and Roger Roode would appear to be sons of Roger Roode whose name does not occur in the Register, but whose will was proved at Wells 22 Jan 1644 by Roger Roode the surviving executor. In it he calls himself Roger Roode of Street husbandman and dates it 23 May 1643. He desires to be buried in the churchyard of Street. Names, son-in-law Peter Sheppard, grandson Peter Sheppard, dau Mary Roode, Alice Cozens, "my old servant." To son Daniel Roode 1s., to son Roger Roode, one close in Lower Houndwood, 4½ acres in Bull Mead, 4 acres arable at Brokenecross, 1 acre at Headlen, 1 acre and ½ acre arable lying below Standle, ½ acre on Standale, ½ acre arable at Double wall in the lower furlong, ½ an acre at Cockroade being my wester half, and 3½ acres in Overbrooks, 1 acre in Fostway, and ½ acre at Begger's bush, ½ acre at Gossblade, 1 acre at Marshalls elme 2 acres at Counsom close, ½ acre at Lyholt lane, ½ acre and a perch at Keenes elme 1 acre at Rodwell, ½ acre at Portway Furlong, and ½ acre on Waxhill. To son Philip Roode 6 acres in Weriall Park, 2½ acres in Lower Houndwood, 3 acres without Abraham Scott's house, 2 acres at Gaston, 1 acre in Standle, 1 acre at Double wall, ½ acre at Long Furlong head, ½ acre in Midfield, ½ acre at Fostway "being my easter half acre there," ½ acre on the west of Richard Grimstead's 5 yards, ½ acre at Cockroade, "being my easter half there," 1 acre at Fostway, "being my wester half there," 1 acre at Cross lane hedge. To my said two sons Roger and Philip two closes of meadow estimated at three acres called Birde Benery, with four acres of arable land. The said two sons Roger and Philip Roode residuary legatees and executors. Witnesses, Henry Fry and William Roode.

⁴¹ The burial of the Joanna Symes, whose will follows, is not on record.

 (Below this, in a later hand, is clearly written, "Mr. William Stode of Street and Elizabeth Hunt of Kingsamburn in y^e county of Southampton." This evidently refers to William Strode and Elizabeth Rivett above, which is also quite clearly written. Query which is correct Hunt or Rivett, an application to Kings Somborne has elicited no reply. Strode must be right and Stode an error, the former is a well-known name in the neighbourhood, the latter unknown.)

(There are several entries quite obliterated, and others of which a letter here and there can be read, but not enough to be able to draw any sure conclusion from them. The years 1677 and 1678 form the last and outside leaf of this remaining fragment of the first volume. The whole from the year 1650 to this end is not only in bad condition, but has been very badly kept, the years are mixed, so that the almost obliterated condition of parts, the interpolation of entries, and the re-writing of entries at a later date, has made it a work of great difficulty to get all the entries into their proper order.)

(The bequest in the will of Thomas Maynard, dated 1720, to "poor persons called Quakers," and the entry in the Register of the burial of William Moxham "by the quakers," a sect still strong in Street, will explain the reason of many omissions from the registers, but at the same time a careful analysis show indications of not only varied spelling, but of absolutely different names being introduced.)

[End of Vol. I.]

BISHOP'S TRANSCRIPTS.

The following are from the Bishop's Transcripts of the Register of Street, remaining in the Bishop's Registry, they are here inserted for the sake of convenience before proceeding with the next volume of the Register. It is so seldom that the Transcript and the Register both exist and agree that it has been considered best to print the whole of the transcripts found. Only two years show much repetition and in these two it has appeared advisable to give both in full that the variations may be readily seen, rather than by introducing such variations either in brackets or in footnotes. By this addition several missing years of the Register are supplied, though at the same time the very imperfect state of the transcripts is made manifest by the small number of years found there, but these additions will show that, notwithstanding their imperfect condition, the printing of these transcripts would be most useful and interesting, while the advantage would be made still more striking in the case of parishes whose registers do not exist prior to the latter part of the seventeenth century, or later.
